By the Associated Press.

San Francisco, June 18.—A big Soviet single-motored airplane sped three Russian aviators across the North Polar wastes tonight on a daring attempt to fly nonstop the 6,000 miles from Moscow to Oakland, Calif.—with stormy weather reported ahead.

Uncertain Arctic weather, censorship and conflicting reports veiled the exact whereabouts of the plane, but it was believed following a route which would take it close by the North Pole, down across central Canada to Edmonton, Alberta, and straight for Oakland, across the bay from here.

The Soviet Embassy in Washington announced at 9 p. m. (Eastern standard time) the flight was still some distance from the Pole itself. Previous reports received here declared the plane passed over the actual polar region as early as 4:30 p. m. (Eastern standard time).

Passes Franz Josef Land.

From Moscow, where strictest secrecy surrounded the flight, the Russian government announced the pioneering flight was under way 24 hours after the takeoff.

The official takeoff time was given as 4:05 a. m. Moscow time (8:05 p. m. Thursday, Eastern standard time).

On the basis of the 9 p. m. position reported by the Russian Embassy, the plane was about halfway between Franz Josef Land and the Pole, or 350 miles from the latter point.

Ahead lay "extremely difficult" weather conditions, the embassy reported, as well as "blind spots" on international maps, marking unexplored areas.

Further difficulty in determining the fliers' positions resulted from the fact they failed to specify east or west longitude in the infrequent position reports picked up by the United States Army radio station at Anchorage, Alaska.

Censorship Invoked.

Presumably to minimize publicity should the flight fail, as did a previous one, the Soviet embassy brought vigorous diplomatic pressure to bear in suppressing news of the flight.

"We are three hours from the pole, flying nicely," said the first report, received at 3 p. m. (E. S. T.) 18 hours after the craft left Moscow in secrecy. The message was received by Russian Consul Gregory I. Gokhman, of San Francisco.

Ninety minutes later Soviet diplomats concentrated here received word the plane had passed the world's top.

At 5:30 p. m. (E. S. T.), the Army radio station at Anchorage, Alaska, reported receipt of "everything is all right" from the three intrepid men aboard the transpolar ship, blazing a new air trail to the United States.

Near the pole, the three fliers passed a floating meteorological station established by fellow countrymen as another step in a daring effort to pioneer a new aviation channel.

Storm Area Reported.

Low pressure areas off the Alaskan coast threatened to cause unsettled weather tonight along the probable course. The Seattle weather bureau reported a storm area in the Gulf of Alaska was moving inland to eastern Alberta. Rain and cloudy conditions prevailed along the coast from Alaska to the California border.

Deep secrecy veiled the amazing adventure until Gokhman made public the first message.

Alexander Troyanovsky, Russian Ambassador to the United States, together with other Soviet representatives and a staff of technicians, appeared here unheralded to watch the progress of the flight and welcome the three aviators expected here Sunday.

For several hours Russian officials and American Government agencies maintained silence about the undertaking, apparently due to Soviet

Loyalists Seize 200 in Plot Of Marxists, Fascist Spies

Vast Conspiracy Against Security of State Charged; Airport at Bilbao Is Captured by Italian Brigade.

By the Associated Press.

Valencia, Spain, June 18.—The Spanish government tonight announced the uncovering of a "vast plot against the security of the state" and the arrest of 200 persons, some of them in high military positions.

Documents seized by the government, the announcement said, proved that leaders of the Poum, or United Marxist Workers Party, previously accused of "Trotskyist" leanings, had conspired with a secret spy organization of Fascists within government territory during the civil war.

This spy organization, it was charged, was under the direction of insurgent generals and gave the insurgent general staff data on operations of government troops and movements of armaments.

Loyalist Airport Seized.

Hendaye, June 18 (AP).—A "Black Arrow"—part Italian—brigade seized the Sondica Airport, just outside Bilbao, today as insurgent headquarters reported the capture of more territory on the edges of the battered Basque capital.

The insurgents said the fleeing Basques fired the hangars and burned an "undetermined number" of airplanes.

Basque losses in the past week of furious fighting were set by the insurgents at a total of 20,000 killed, wounded, captured and deserted.

The Basques insisted today they still held Mount Archanda, key point of their third line of defense on the east bank of the Nervion River. This conflicted with insurgent claims of capture of this height.

Refugees who made their way here tonight said Bilbao was fortified with barricades of cobblestones and hidden mines for a finish fight.

May Recognize Franco.

London, June 18 (AP).—There were indications tonight that Great Britain would grant Spanish insurgent Generalissimo Franco the rights of a belligerent government if he captures Bilbao.

The foreign office received Franco's request today that Britain accord his government the rights and obligations of an independent state as far as hostilities are concerned.

There was no official comment, but usually reliable informants said that favorable action depended upon Franco's success in the Bilbao campaign.

Senate's Vendetta On Court Reform To Open June 29

The Senate's chess game on the President's judiciary program yesterday developed into a duel of parliamentary strategists with firing slated to begin in earnest the week of June 29.

"It's their next move," said Senator Burton K. Wheeler (Democrat), of Montana, chairman of the court plan opposition steering committee.

Administration leaders indicated they would be ready to move the week after next. First vote will come on a motion to call up the bill, and even the opponents do not plan to object.

From two to four weeks of debate were forecast.

Recognizing that the fight from now on is primarily one of parliamentary procedure, Senator Bennett Champ Clark (Democrat), of Missouri, has been included on Wheeler's opposition steering committee. Clark is a student of Senate rules.

Proponents have in their favor a presiding officer friendly to the court plan, Senator Key Pittman, of Nevada.

Blum and Senate Deadlocked on Bill

Paris, June 18 (AP).—The life of Premier Blum's cabinet virtually was put at stake tonight in a deadlocked conflict with the Senate over the premier's stand for emergency powers over France's finances.

The Senate today refused to grant Blum the powers to control finances by decree he asks until July 31. The premier refused to accept anything less.

This foreshadowed a stiff battle in the Senate tomorrow, with the fate of the People's Front cabinet in the balance. Some cabinet members said the premier faces almost certain defeat if he insists on keeping unchanged the bill which would confer the powers he asks to restore health to the nation's finances.

6-Mile Area Swept By Nebraska Tornado

Osmond, Nebr., June 18 (AP).—A tornado swept over 6 square miles near here late today, bringing damage estimated by farmers at from $50,000 to $75,000. The storm killed livestock and levelled farm buildings. Power and telephone lines were blown down, leaving Osmond in darkness tonight.

Mary Pickford, Rogers To Wed Next Saturday

Los Angeles, June 18 (AP).—Mary Pickford was so excited she could not remember the street address of Pickfair, her home, when she and Buddy Rogers applied for a marriage license today. Breathlessly, they arrived at the license bureau just at closing time.

D. C. Tax Bill To Be Sped By Senators

House Retains Chain Store, Inheritance Amendments.

Restoration of Loan Proviso for District May Be Sought.

By James D. Secrest.

Prompt consideration and probable amendment await the District omnibus tax bill in the Senate, following its passage yesterday in the House.

Standing pat on its sock-the-District attitude, the House refused to eliminate the two amendments attached on Thursday and reiterated its preference for a 20-cent realty tax increase to an income levy.

The amendments retained, despite separate votes as demanded by the Kennedy sub-committee, impose a severe tax on all local chain stores and substitute a higher graduate scale of inheritances taxes for the levies proposed by the commissioners and the committee.

The chain store tax, according to its author, Representative Dies (Democrat), of Texas, will raise $750,000 in revenue. While the levy scales upward from $10, it is so worded that all organizations operating more than 30 stores anywhere in the United States will have to pay $550 on each store in Washington.

District officials predicted that it would drive many of the chain stores into nearby Maryland and Virginia.

Inheritance Sum Uncertain.

Neither Dies nor District authorities have any idea how much revenue the inheritance tax scale would raise. The Commissioners' proposal was expected to raise $800,000.

Absent from the bill are the first two titles, which authorized the Secretary of the Treasury to make advances to the District government and the Commissioners to install parking meters.

The District heads, it was said last night, will hold a conference on the changes as soon as possible and be prepared to make recommendations to the Senate District Committee.

It is believed that they will ask for the restoration of Title 1, because of the danger of running short of funds before new taxes are collected, but will not press for the parking meter authorization.

The Commissioners also are expected to stand with the House subcommittee in asking that the chain store and inheritance tax amendments be stricken from the bill.

Seeking to expedite the measure, Representative Kennedy, chairman of the sub-committee that handled the bill, conferred late yesterday with Senator Copeland (Democrat), of New York, in the absence of Chairman King, of the Senate District Committee.

He suggested that members of his sub-committee be permitted to appear before the Senate group and explain provisions of the bill and the reasons for their adoption.

Another conference will be held on Monday, and if Senator King has returned to his office by that time, Kennedy will discuss the proposal with him.

Several members of the Senate District Committee indicated a preference for the income tax over a realty tax increase following the House's action, but at the same time they intimated they may not make an issue of the House's stand because of the necessity for expediting the bill.

Senator Glass, of Virginia, although unfamiliar with the local tax situation, stated that he favored the principle of an income tax.

Three separate votes were demanded by members of the House sub-committee before the House

Father O'Leary Slightly Better, Doctors Report

The Rev. Arthur O'Leary, S. J., president of Georgetown University, who has been seriously ill at Georgetown Hospital, was reported slightly improved, doctors reported last night.

Father O'Leary, the only Washingtonian to become head of Georgetown in the 148 years of its existence, was inaugurated as president in 1935. He rallied late yesterday after the last rites of the church had been administered to him.

Forty-nine years old and a native of Washington, Father O'Leary underwent an operation for removal of gallstones some time ago and was thought to have completely recovered.

Tax-Dodgers Cast Headed By Laughton

Schick, De Ronde Among 6 Americans Named to Committee.

Actor Legally Switched Assets to England, Irey Asserts.

By Sidney Olson.

Charles Laughton, of Scarborough, England, one of the great contemporary actors of stage and screen, yesterday starred in a new role—that of a British subject who "effected a substantial reduction" in his taxes by forming a personal holding company in England.

The 38-year-old Briton, whose well-upholstered frame is familiar to movie-goers as the infamous Capt Bligh of H. M. S. Bounty, as the gentle Rembrandt, as the all-too-human King Henry VIII and the meek Ruggles of Red Gap, was named yesterday, along with six Americans, as a tax-evader at the hearing before the joint Congressional committee studying the problem.

Elmer L. Irey, aggressive chief of the Internal Revenue Bureau's intelligence unit, named Laughton and the others before the committee.

Financiers Named.

The other tax avoiders, whose methods were described by Treasury Undersecretary Roswell Magill as "probably perfectly legal," with one exception, were:

Jules S. Bache, 75, banker, clubman, famous art patron and opera lover, director of 16 corporations, member of 12 exclusive clubs, a native and resident of New York City.

Wallace Groves, one of the mystery men of Wall Street, a native of Alexandria, graduate of Georgetown University, a long-time and consistent foe of the Securities and Exchange Commission. He controls through wide security holdings the Whelan Drug Store chain and the United Cigar Store chain; is president and a director of Loft, Inc.; Hunter Baltimore Rye Distillery, Inc., and Certain-teed Corporation. His age, background, and financial record have escaped publicity except for the divorce granted his wife, Mrs. Monaei Lindley Groves, at Carson City, Nev., on Saturday of last week.

Percy K. Hudson, off-and-on member of the New York Stock Exchange since 1900. No listed firm affiliations except his majority interest in the Canadian firm, Laurentian Mines, Ltd.

Jacob Schick, inventor of the electric dry-shave razor, retired lieutenant colonel, U. S. A., former resident of Connecticut and now a Canadian citizen.

George Westinghouse, jr., of various addresses. His background was not mentioned by the Treasury officials, nor was he identified except by name.

Philip De Ronde, 55, international financier, chairman of the board and director of the Phenix Securities Corporation—the same company that Wallace Groves heads—president, Oriental Navigation Co. and the Hibernia Trust Co.; director of the Empire Trust Co. of New York; one-time Paraguayan consul at New York; steamship financier and operator.

De Ronde's Tax-Dodging.

De Ronde's case was the first first brought to the attention of the committee. Irey asserted De Ronde now owes the Government $33,000 in unpaid taxes and interest. He said De Ronde offered to make a settlement of $1,700 as a compromise for this debt on January 7, of this year, pleading no funds. On the day before, Irey said, he re-

Storm Twice Halts Flight to Bangkok Of Amelia Earhart

Akyab, Burma (Saturday), June 19 (AP).—Amelia Earhart returned to Akyab at 7:45 a. m. today (8:13 p. m., Eastern standard time, Friday) after her second attempt to fly to Bangkok, Siam, on another leg of her flight around the world, failed.

Bad weather forced her to return. She had hopped for Bangkok at 6:30 a. m. today (7 p. m., Eastern standard time, Friday) in the face of treacherous monsoon weather.

On their first attempt to reach Bangkok yesterday Miss Earhart and her navigator, Capt. Fred Noonan, were forced to return to Akyab after a two-hour battle with a monsoon.

She had landed here first at 12:34 p. m. (1:04 a. m. Eastern standard time) after a 400-mile flight across the Bay of Bengal from Calcutta.

Taking off again, she was forced back because of a sudden breakdown of the Akyab direction finding wireless station at the height of the monsoon.

Miss Earhart left Dumdum Airport just outside Calcutta at 7:05 a. m. Calcutta time (8:12 p. m. Thursday Eastern standard time) despite reports of treacherous weather over the bay.

France Works for Peace; Frankness of Blum Will Win Admirers in America; Peace Seen in Paris-London Co-operation.

No. 7 in a Series.

By Felix Morley,

Copyright, 1937, The Washington Post.

Paris, June 9.—Ancient Gaul, according to the always reliable Julius Caesar, was divided into three parts. Contemporary France, no less definitely, has two major aspects demanding separate consideration by even the most superficial student of its problems.

The one is foreign policy, on which there is an extraordinary degree of unanimity here now. The other is domestic policy, on which vehement dissension is at least equally pronounced.

Several speeches and interviews have been given by Leon Blum in connection with the first anniversary of his accession to the premiership, which was reached on June 4. In all of these he emphasized the importance of the internal reforms which he is endeavoring to bring about. In respect to foreign policy, he told one interviewer, "I can be more brief, because I think there are fewer critics and less severe criticism."

The minimization of his greatest triumph is characteristic of this Socialist statesman. He would rather meet his enemies in direct debate on burning issues than seek to conceal his abundant difficulties by trying to capitalize on achieved success.

It is easy to disagree with Mr. Blum, but it is impossible not to be attracted by his very straightforward, friendly and appealing personality. He is more mellow and less opinionated than Norman Thomas. He will be very popular in America, if he is able to fulfill his ambition to visit the United States this fall.

To measure the extent of Mr. Blum's success in maintaining and strengthening peace it is necessary to recall some of the major problems he has been called upon to confront. When he took office Europe was still reverberating from the shock caused by Germany's reoccupation of the demilitarized Rhineland. Italian troops had been in Addis Ababa for a month and the repute of the League of Nations was at an all-time low. In Spain gathering clouds foreshadowed the

Robinson Hits 'Spend-to-Save' Policy of WPA

By Robert C. Albright.

Two-fisted, realistic Joseph Taylor Robinson, who has fought the Administration's battles on every major issue since 1933, yesterday turned on WPA "spending-to-save" policies with both arms flying.

It was a tense moment when the Senate's recognized majority leader, deserted on this question by half of his Democratic following, warned that "in time of prosperity we ought to put our house in order."

"You may laugh about a $36,000,000,000 debt hanging over the Treasury of the United States if you wish to," Robinson told the Senate, "but with all my refined and expanded sense of humor I find it impossible to laugh about such a thing."

For the first time this session Robinson found himself espousing a course not favored by his President—requiring local communities able to do so to put up a fixed percentage of local, non-Federal WPA relief costs.

Offers Amendment.

He had offered an amendment fixing this percentage at 25 per cent. Senator James F. Byrnes (Democrat), of South Carolina, who first proposed 40 per cent local "matching," had accepted the modified proposal.

But a wide scattering of so-called "young liberal" Western Democrats, who have previously followed their leader, voiced loud protests. And Robinson's own assistant majority leader, Senator Alben W. Barkley, of Kentucky, took the leadership in the fight against his plan.

Robinson chose a propitious moment to make his retrenchment appeal. The national debt on Tuesday had moved to an unprecedented high—$36,633,907,802. But business, farm income and wage levels were passing all post-depression marks.

Robinson commented on both.

"I can understand why Mr. Hopkins would prefer to have no restrictions at all," he said. "He is accustomed to that method of procedure. But I cannot understand why Congress should say we will impose no restrictions when the Federal debt is higher than it was

Rep. Norton Set To Head House Labor Group

D. C. Committee Leader Prepares to Take Post of Connery.

Representative Mary T. Norton, of New Jersey, the first "lady mayor" of the District, yesterday sang what probably will be her swan song in the House as chairman of the District Committee.

A short while after announcing she will accept the chairmanship of the Labor Committee, it offered to her, Mrs. Norton took the House floor to thank the Kennedy subcommittee for its "hours of work" on the District tax bill.

"The work of the District Committee is very much misunderstood and little appreciated by the House," she remarked.

"As soon as the District Committee brings a bill to the floor of the House certain members begin sniping at it although they have made no effort to carry their objections before the committee.

"Membership on the District Committee does us no good back home, but the District depends on us."

Wants Authority Increased.

She concluded with a plea for support of legislation to give the District Commissioners more power to administer municipal affairs. Admitting the difficulty of obtaining substantial support for her national representation bill, Mrs. Norton expressed the belief a measure

Republic Assails 'Status Quo' Plea

On the Labor Front.

The steel workers organizing committee filed formal charges with the National Labor Relations Board against the Republic Steel Corporation here.

Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins telegraphed appeals to Governors of the seven States in the strike-affected area to preserve the peace.

Back-to-work movements were suspended as a truce prevailed in the strike area pending an investigation by the three-man Federal mediation board.

Philip Murray, for the S. W. O. C., and Louis L. Guarnieri, attorney for the Republic Steel Corporation, testified at a Senate hearing on mail deliveries at Republic plants.

Steel Charges Filed.

By William V. Nessly.

While Secretary of Labor Perkins yesterday was wiring appeals to seven Governors to maintain peace in the steel strike area pending settlement efforts by the new Federal mediation board, the Steel Workers Organizing Committee filed charges against the Republic Steel Corporation before the National Labor Relations Board here.

"Shooting at pickets" by company guards and maintenance of "extensive arsenals, including machine guns, rifles, revolvers, tear and bombing gas" by Republic Steel was charged by the S. W. O. C., which is conducting the strike for the John L. Lewis Committee for Industrial Organization.

Lee Pressman, C. I. O. counsel, filed the charges, which also allege violation of the Wagner labor relations act by discharging employes and by effecting a lockout at the corporation's Canton, Ohio, tin mill last year. Sponsoring of "back-to-work" movements by Republic since the strike started also was alleged.

The Labor Relations Board said it would start an investigation at once, the inquiry being in addition to activities by the mediation board and investigations by two Senate committees.

Pressman, in a letter to the board, said the S. W. O. C. wanted an election under board auspices "to definitely determine" that this group had a majority of Republic employes, but said the company's "policy of discrimination, coercion and intimidation" makes impossible a "fair, impartial" election at present.

Secretary Perkins' plea for the "status quo" in steel operations while the mediation board acts brought a vigorous reply last night from the Republic corporation.

Saying a "veritable reign of anarchy exists," the company declared:

"Any suggestion that the status quo of plant operations be maintained during the work of the Federal Mediation Board is destructive of the rights of the thousands of workers, idle for nearly four weeks, who want to go back to their jobs."

Conciliators to Cleveland.

Other developments in the strike yesterday included:

Secretary Perkins sent James F. Dewey and Robert F. Pilkington, conciliators, to Cleveland to assist the new mediation board.

Assistant Secretary of Labor E. F. McGrady, one of the three board members, arrived last night from Europe to confer with Miss Perkins before flying to Cleveland for the first meeting of the board today.

The Senate Civil Liberties Committee continued gathering evidence on the Memorial Day strike battle at Chicago, when nine persons were killed or fatally wounded.

Both sides were represented by witnesses before the Senate Postoffice Committee investigating charges of interference with the mails in connection with the strike.

Swanson Audience Refused, Ex-Ensign's Bride Says Former Marriage Voids Their Wedding

Dressed in riding breeches Mrs. Beulah Kathleen Nash arrived in Washington yesterday to see the Secretary of the Navy. In an effort to have her husband, Charles A. (Chuck) Nash, jr., who lost his commission as an ensign because of his marriage while still at the Naval Academy, reinstated in the Navy, Mrs. Nash revealed that she had been previously married at the age of 15.

"I am not legally married to Chuck," a statement signed by the Norfolk, Va., girl said, "because on July 23, 1934, I eloped to Glenville, Ga., with Oren Anderson, the son of Mrs. Sarah Fennall, of Glenville.

Mrs. Nash, who did not see Secretary Swanson, told reporters that she conferred with Archibald Oden, Swanson's private secretary. Oden had previously said that Mrs. Nash would be unable to see the Secretary. "Only an act of Congress," he said, "could reinstate Nash."

Marriage while still a midshipman was an "unforgivable" breach of the oath Annapolis students are sworn to observe, naval officers explained.

Although official statements were not forthcoming at the Navy Department yesterday, it was learned authoritatively that Nash had taken no steps to secure his reinstatement in the Navy. Nash, when interviewed at his home in Saginaw, Mich., said that he was "afraid nothing she can do will reinstate me in the Navy."

Mrs. Nash's father and mother

Woman Gets Year for Beating, Hurling Baby Against Bathtub

After hearing what he said was the "worst case" in his experience, Police Court Judge Walter J. Casey yesterday sentenced Mrs. Theresa Cronin, 38, to 360 days in jail for beating a small boy left in her care.

Judge Casey also ordered the woman to pay a fine of $300. If she fails to pay it, she must spend another 360 days in jail.

The boy, 2½-year-old William ("Laddie") Van Ness, jr., was in court as Mrs. Cronin faced trial. He had a black and swollen eye and welts and bruises on his body.

Last night the child was a patient in Children's Hospital. With him, sharing his room for the night, was his mother, Mrs. Ruby Adelia Van Ness, 36, of 1500 D street northwest, a WPA teacher separated from her husband.

For three months Mrs. Van Ness had been sharing her home with Mrs. Cronin and her husband, Joseph, an employe at the Navy Yard. In return for their three rooms, Mrs. Cronin agreed to take care of "Laddie" during the day.

Mrs. Cronin was in the District Jail last night.

Pastors Seized By Nazis Now More Than 500

2 More Members of Council of Confessional Synod Arrested.

By the Associated Press.

Berlin, June 18.—Two more pastors and members of the Council of Brethren of the Protestant Confessional Synod have been arrested, Berlin headquarters of the synod was informed tonight.

They were the Rev. Mr. Heime, of Schneidemuehl, and the Rev. Mr. Middendorf, of Oldenburg. They were charged with violating the interior ministry's decree which forbids reading from the pulpit the names of men and women who have resigned church membership.

A check of the present status of arrests among the confessionals, which the government seeks to bring under its administration, revealed:

Sixteen clergymen, four lay members, including two women, are in jail or concentration camps. Twenty-two ministers and vicars and two lay parish helpers were forced to leave the city or town where they were engaged in religious work.

Eleven pastors, one theological professor and two teachers of religion were forbidden to speak in public or to preach. One professor was suspended from his university.

Most of those under arrest were apprehended during the last two weeks.

More than 500 pastors have been arrested under Nazi rule, the Rev. Martin Niemoeller, leader of protestant opposition to government domination of the church, charged today.

Confessional circles believed the remaining provincial members of the Council of Brethren will be rounded up within the next few days.

The present cause of dispute is the forthcoming elections to choose a synod to conduct church activities. (Chancellor Hitler ordered the elections after the Reich Evangelical Council, set up by Nazis to coordinate the church, resigned.)

The Rev. Martin Niemoeller told a congregation in Wildersdorf suburban church last night he understood the elections were set for June 27, "now that the whole directorate of the whole confessional church has been suppressed.

"Only the enemies of the church have a free hand," he said. "If the object is that the church is to be fitted into a political framework, the answer can only be: No."

Politics and People

New Deal Defections Continue as Storm Clouds Gather Over Labor Crisis, Industrial Slump.

By Franklyn Waltman

Not only has Washington had more than its share of rain in the last few days, but dark clouds continued to hover low over the White House. It is no wonder President Roosevelt wants to spend three days in the middle of the Chesapeake Bay. He will, perhaps, see some sunlight even if he does not get anything else out of the trip.

There appears to be an epidemic of acidosis around the Capital, especially in New Deal ranks. It seems to have spread from those opposing the President's Supreme Court reorganization bill to many of those regarded as safely on the alkaline side of the New Deal.

First, it was Vice President Garner summarily packing his bags and going home to his beloved Uvalde, just when Congress, after five months of yawning, decided to get down to business. Then that old New Deal warrior, Hugh S. Johnson, suddenly bolts the reservation with a furious tirade against the pending Roosevelt program as "despotism," revolution, fascism, communism and everything else.

And now, of all people, comes Senate Democratic Leader Joe Robinson supporting a proposal to curb relief expenditures and admonishing his Senate colleagues that they may laugh at a national debt of $36,000,000,000, but that he, with all his "refined and expanded sense of humor," finds it impossible to do any laughing. Indeed asserts Mr. Robinson, "in a time of prosperity we ought to begin to put our house in order."

And so think a great many persons, far more than have yet expressed this belief publicly. Perhaps it is this epidemic of acidosis, or perhaps they are getting just a little tired of charming smiles and honeyed words without action, but a number of Mr. Roosevelt's well-wishers are becoming restless, if not chagrined, at the way in which he is letting things drag along.

Business circles are pessimistic and gloomy. This may be a psychological result of the depressed condition of the stock market. The uncertainty flowing from the labor situation, which seems to getting worse, is undoubtedly another factor. But it is fed also by a fear that a minor recession in industrial activity is ahead for the next few months—and the Government economists are commencing to make such predictions, as witness the report of the Bureau of Agricultural Economics yesterday.

As evidence of the concern felt within the inner New Deal circles, listen to an excerpt from a speech made some weeks ago by Leon Henderson, former NRA economist and still influential in the Administration. This speech came to light this week when it was inserted in the Congressional Record by Senator Hugo L. Black, sponsor of the wage-and-hour bill.

"What is the situation?" asked Henderson, and then he proceeded to answer: "Well, just look at installment credit. Last year it amounted to $9,000,000,000, or 50 per cent more than in the insane days of 1929. Yet business activity and prices were both lower. If these had not been lower, perhaps installment credit might have been 100 per cent larger than in 1929—that is, if this back-breaking load could have been carried.

"In 1929 only 50 per cent of automobile sales were made on installment terms—in 1936 the percentage has risen to 65 per cent. Yet despite the easing of installment credit terms and the extremely substantial increase in pay rolls, huge stocks of goods remained on the shelves of retailers."

Henderson is concerned over recent price rises. He pointed out that recent wage gains have been nullified by the rise in retail prices and he predicted that "the prospective rise for the fall of from 5 to 7½ per cent, when applied to all workers, will undoubtedly reduce purchasing power, which, as retail sales show, is even now faltering a bit."

These and other events of recent days make it appropriate to recall the excellent Don Quixote satire presented by the Gridiron Club at its last dinner in the presence of the President and Vice President Garner, sitting within an arm's length of each other.

The scene was an inn in the the mountains of old Castile several centuries ago. The characters were Don Quixote, not otherwise identified than as a dreamer and Knight Errant, and his henchman, Sancho Panza Garner.

"Good Garner," asserted Don Quixote, "it is my will that thou be seated here by my side, and become almost one and the same thing with me; that thou eat from off my plate and drink from the same cup from which I drink; for the same may be said of politics which is said of love—that it makes all things equal."

"Lissen, Boss," replied Sancho Panza, "if I get enough to eat, I don't mind eating alone. Far's that's concerned, bean soup at the Senate restaurant suits me better than one of your swell White House dinners, where you hafta wear your soup and fish and talk polite and be uncomfortable . . ."

"Good Jack, thou wert ever a rustic!" exclaimed Don Quixote. "Dost understand that our mission is to relieve those in distress?"

"Mebbe so," replied Sancho Panza. "I wouldn't know. I do know that since we got into this Knight Errant business all I've got from your enchanted friends is a kick in the pants—and I have had to keep my mouth shut, besides."

"Oh, thou art impatient until I remove the embargo from thy tongue," asserted Don Quixote. "Suppose I do so, just while we are wandering in these mountains."

"Yes," shrilled Sancho Panza. "Let me talk now, while I'm still able. I'm getting cold on this Knight Errant business. Where's the majesty and pomp in governing 96 critters no bigger'n hazel nuts?"

"How sayest thou, good Garner?" interrupted Don Quixote. "Hear'st thou not the neighing of steeds, the sounds of trumpets and rattling of drums?"

"Naw—nothin' but the bleating of sheep—up on the Hill," replied Sancho Panza.

"Thy fears, good Garner," Don Quixote rejoined, "prevent thee from hearing or seeing aright. There is nothing to fear but fear itself. If thou art so much afraid, retire and leave me alone, for with my single arm I shall insure victory to the side which I favor."

"What's eating you, Boss?" Garner demanded. "There's nothing there but a lot of tame Senators and house-broken bankers."

"I am he," continued Don Quixote, "for whom is reserved dangers, great exploits and valorous achievements . . ."

"I am only a Texas farm boy," asserted Sancho Panza, "but I got horse sense—and I think we better be getting out of here."

"Dost not perceive that all affairs in which knights errant are concerned appear follies and extravagances and seem all done by the rule of contraries?" asked Don Quixote.

"Says which?" asked the perplexed Sancho Panza.

"It's enough that God understands me," Don Quixote continued. "See'st thou not yon fortress of privilege, yon castle of finance? There lies some poor forgotten wight under dire oppression to whose relief I am brought hither."

"Them's windmills, Boss," asserted Sancho Panza. "They grind corn. They're useful."

"Peace, Garner, for though they seem to be windmills, they are not so," admonished Don Quixote. "Look! What assassins and hobgoblins come out to oppose us? See those horrid visages with which they think to scare us! Now, rascals, have at you!"

with McGrady, the Secretary said they had discussed matters that had arisen since he departed for Europe three weeks ago. In reply to a question she said the Government does not plan to make any proposals or suggestions to the mediation board, since it is an independent agency.

Miss Perkins' telegram was addressed to Gov. Martin L. Davey of Ohio, who Thursday had brought appointment of the mediation board by his appeal for Federal intervention. The Secretary wired:

"Very important that peace be maintained at all points during work of board. Maintenance of order and of civil rights is of course a primary function of State governments and its is anticipated and expected that you and other Governors will act with wisdom and fairness to this end. Request you to maintain the 'status quo' with regard to operations during mediation. Believe under suggested conditions board can act with speed."

While the S. W. O. C. previously had filed charges against Republic Steel, one of the four independent companies involved in the strike, at Cleveland, those filed here yesterday were much more inclusive. The latter named 22 employes alleged to have been discharged from plants at Cleveland, Warren and Massillon, Ohio, for union activity.

Charge "Thugs" Imported.

Other allegations made yesterday were:

That since the strike the corporation had imported "a great number of armed thugs and gunmen into cities where its plants are located" to interfere with picketing.

That at its Warren plant the company had used "various devices and stratagems for the purpose of creating discord and dissension between white and colored employes so as to destroy morale, lead to race riots and thus interfere with self-organization."

That the corporation had "acted in collusion with the chief of police of Canton" to swear in special police to intimidate employes.

That the company "in collusion with the sheriff and Mayor of Youngstown" had sworn in special police to intimidate employes."

Senator Robert M. La Follette (Progressive), Wisconsin, said the Civil Liberties Committee would make public "at the proper time" the news reel showing the fatal Chicago rioting. It has been suppressed, but some Senators and officials have seen it at a private showing.

Would Call Officials.

Hearings before the Postoffice Committee brought from Philip Murray, head of the S. W. O. C., a demand that steel company heads be compelled to disclose how much money has been spent for arms and "gunmen." He said the mayor and police chief of Chicago, Sheriff Elser, of Mahoning County, Ohio, and the mayors of Canton and Youngstown should be called to get a complete picture of the strike. He offered to open the union's financial records to the committee.

On the other hand, Louis L. Guarnieri, Republic Steel attorney, related repeated efforts to mail food to workmen inside the plants who had not struck, but said the shipments were rejected as "irregular."

He insisted the company was entitled to send mail food into the plants, since pickets had blocked other efforts to supply the nonstrikers. Trains were halted, trucks turned back and an airplane flying into the factory grounds was fired on, he said.

Describes Pickets' Weapons.

Pickets at Warren were described as armed with "ball bats, lengths of pipe and rubber hose," and he declared that "if you do not have a C. I. O. pass or are not a city or county official, you are not permitted to go down the street."

A telegram from Sheriff Elser in denial of Murray's charges was read at the hearing. It said:

"Astonished at Philip Murray's charges and vile assertions about my office.

"I ask you to read * * * my unqualified denial that any of my special deputies sworn in by me to maintain law and order are thugs, domestic or imported.

"They are, without exception, long-time residents and mostly taxpayers of Mahoning County. They are not paid by Republic Steel or any other corporation, but receive their compensation from the treasury of Mahoning County."

Meanwhile, Senator Robert F. Wagner (Democrat), of New York, author of the labor relations act, discussing refusal of steel companies to sign a written agreement, said:

"In my opinion, such action is a clear violation of the act and is certain to produce the most virulent manifestations of economic strife. It is morally and legally indefensible."

On the other side, Senator Arthur F. Vandenberg (Republican), of Michigan, issued a statement saying the mediation board starts "under the handicap of not only a one-sided Presidential opinion respecting the issue but also with one-sided predilections of their own."

Quotes Taft, Garrison.

President Roosevelt had said that if a man was willing to reach a verbal agreement, common sense called for him to be willing to sign it. Vandenberg quoted Charles P. Taft 2d, chairman of the mediation board, as having written in a book recently that he favors industrial unions such as the C. I. O. sponsors and that "fuel is added to the flames by the silly refusal of employers to put such agreements as they may reach in writing."

Lloyd K. Garrison, third board member, was quoted as having said "the establishment of satisfactory relations between labor and management * * * depends upon frank acceptance of collective bargaining * * * and the reduction of those agreements to writing."

'Truce' Greets 3 Mediators In Steel Strike

Both Sides Relax; Peace Conference Slated for Tuesday.

By the Associated Press.

Cleveland, June 18.—A tacit "truce" in the wide-flung steel strike reigned tonight.

On the eve of a fact-finding investigation by the three-man Federa mediation board, appointed by Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins, back-to-work movements were suspended to await the outcome of the board's recommendations, and a marked let-down in tension was apparent.

The board, headed by Charles P. Taft 2d, son of the late Chief Justice William Howard Taft, will open the investigation with headquarters in Cleveland tomorrow.

It was learned in usually well informed quarters that the board probably would try to get union and corporation executives together for a "peace conference" before any hearings are held.

Invitations to Parley.

Invitations to a peace conference Tuesday, it was learned, probably will be sent to John L. Lewis, C. I. O. chairman; Philip Murphy, chairman of the Steel Workers Organizing Committee; Tom Girdler, chairman of Republic Steel; Frank Purnell, president of Youngstown Sheet & Tube; Eugene Grace, president of Bethlehem, and P. D. Block, president of Inland Steel.

If the steel company heads are unwilling to meet the union chieftains around a conference table, it was learned, the board intends to use the same technique Gov. Murphy, of Michigan, used in settling the General Motors strike—to carry proposals and counter-proposals from one side to the other, each quartered in a separate hotel room.

Taft expressed the hope that efforts to resume work at the mills would be postponed until the board has a chance to act.

The Federal chairman's statement differed markedly with the viewpoint of Ray L. Thomas, Youngstown (Ohio) attorney and leader of a "back-to-work" movement in the Mahoning Valley.

Thomas Assails Delay.

At a meeting of the Youngstown Citizens Conciliation Council, Thomas declared the men he represents are not willing to delay their movement pending action by the mediation board.

In the same meeting J. C. Argetsinger, counsel for the Youngstown Sheet & Tube Co., said his company would adhere to the position that a signed contract was not required, and that even if an employes' election was held the company would not be under obligation to sign a contract.

He suggested that the legal question of the company's obligation should be taken to the National Labor Relations Board and then to the Supreme Court for a final decision.

Throughout the seven-State strike area—where more than 100,000 men have been idle in the "showdown" battle between John L. Lewis' C. I. O. and four independent steel companies over the question of signed labor contracts—quiet prevailed.

Pickets Less Belligerent.

Picket lines, although still operating steadfastly, slackened their attitude of belligerency. There were few jeers as shifts of nonstrikers entered and left strike-sieged plants.

Both sides waited—and hoped.

Leaders in the bitter controversy pledged "co-operation" with President Roosevelt's mediators, but they withheld comment on the question of how far they will go in accepting the board as an arbitration body—empowered to hand down final terms of settlement—rather than as a mere force of "moral suasion."

An early settlement of the costly struggle was heralded in a statement by steel spokesmen, who said frankly that staggering losses have been suffered through the strike.

Girdler, Purnell Firm.

Yet both Tom Girdler, president of the Republic Steel, and Frank Purnell, president of Youngstown Sheet and Tube—whose companies are involved in the strike along with Bethlehem and Inland Steel—remained definitely determined not to submit on the major issue, the point of signed contracts.

C. I. O. leaders, meanwhile, drove ahead in a campaign to raise a $2,500,000 "war chest" in expectation of a prolonged siege in the event their demands are not settled by mediation.

Seven men were injured at Canton, Ohio, tonight, one requiring hospital treatment, when, police said, 100 steel strikers halted a back-to-work march of 50 nonstriking employes of the Republic Steel Corporation.

The fight raged for 20 minutes before police reached the scene and quelled the disturbance, arresting one striker on suspicion and two other men as material witnesses.

Police said four men, including J. D. Stewart, militant leader of the back-to-work movement, were spirited away to the union's headquarters and beaten before they were rescued by police.

New Riot Suits Filed.

Chicago, June 18 (AP).—Suits totaling $60,000 were filed today on behalf of two men injured in the Memorial Day riot in the steel strike, bringing to $110,000 the amount of damages asked from police within two days. Nine persons were injured fatally in the battle.

to broaden the powers of the District heads would be adopted by the House.

Mrs. Norton's decision to relinquish the chairmanship of the District Committee, which she has held for six years, places Representative Palmisano, of Maryland, in line for the job.

He is prepared to take over the post as soon as Mrs. Norton steps out. At that time he will resign as chairman of the Education Committee.

Mrs. Norton made her announcement following a conference with Speaker Bankhead, who, it is understood, urged her to remain as head of the District Committee. Because she comes from a labor district, however, Mrs. Norton said she would prefer to take the Labor Committee helm.

The choice must be made by the Ways and Means Committee and be approved by the House, but it is traditional that the ranking majority member is promoted to a vacant chairmanship if she wants the job.

"I deeply regret that I am compelled to leave the District Committee," Mrs. Norton said in a formal statement.

"I represent a labor district in New Jersey and I feel that the people of that district have more claim on me than do the people of the District, or anyone else.

"For six years I have given the District and its problems my undivided attention—problems that are close to my heart. And if I do get the appointment as chairman of the Labor Committee I shall always be on the floor of the House fighting for the District whenever it needs help.

"I can't emphasize too strongly my appreciation for the co-operation of the District officials, its residents and especially the press. Memories of these associations will be cherished as long as I live."

adopted the District tax bill. No roll calls were requested, however, because of the apparent determination of the majority to go along with the members who had been sniping at the District and the bill.

Representative Nichols (Democrat), of Oklahoma, asked for the separate votes on the chain store tax and the inheritance tax amendment.

On division votes the amendments were upheld by 131 to 53 and 153 to 45, respectively.

Representative Dirksen (Republican), of Illinios, champion of the income tax, asked for a separate vote on the committee amendment to substitute a 20-cent realty tax increase. He lost 187 to 47.

Among those who voted with Dirksen for the income levy were Representative Collins, chairman of the sub-committee on District appropriations; Mapes (Republican), of Michigan, who was author of the original local income tax bill, and Cochran (Democrat), of Missouri, who has introduced a resolution to bring about a constitutional amendment to permit States to tax Federal salaries and Federal Government to tax State salaries.

Chairman Mary T. Norton, of the District Committee, who was absent during consideration of the bill, and Minority Leader Snell voted with the majority against the income tax.

Movie Director's Murderer Known, Says Investigator

San Diego, Calif., June 18 (AP).—Gene Williams, chief investigator for District Attorney Buron Fitts, of Los Angeles, said today, "I know the man who killed William Desmond Taylor."

The statement was made at the twenty-seventh annual convention of the District Attorneys Association of California.

Taylor, Hollywood movie director, was shot to death 15 years ago.

"Take the Taylor case, for example," Williams said in discussing use of scientific methods in solving crimes. "I know the man who killed him. I'll probably tell who he is in about a month."

$1.70 D. C. Tax Second Highest Put on Realty

Top Rate Under Full Valuation Was $1.80 in 1927.

A realty tax rate of $1.70 in the District, as ordered by the House, will be the second highest levy ever imposed here, Auditor Daniel J. Donovan disclosed yesterday.

Although the rate was $1.95 in 1924, it was based on assessments of two-thirds valuation. After Congress passed a law requiring that assessments be on full fair market value, the rate dropped as low as $1.20 in 1924.

The highest rate since the 100 per cent valuation yardstick was adopted was $1.80 in 1927. The rate was $1.70, however, for several years prior to the reduction to $1.50 in 1934.

For 42 years, from the formation of the commission government in 1878 until the fiscal year 1920, the rate was $1.50 while assessments were on a two-thirds of valuation basis.

Senator Copeland (Democrat), of New York, yesterday reiterated a proposal long advocated by Senators friendly to the Dsitrict, i. e., that the method of assessment be changed so that the realty tax rate here will no longer be a target of members of Congress.

"You can argue until you are blue in the face," he said, "and they won't understand that the assessments here are on 100 per valuation, whereas in their districts they may be as low as one-third.

"All they can see is the low rate, and they immediately jump to the conclusion that the people of the District are way undertaxed."

Senator Thomas, chairman of the sub-committee on District appropriations, has suggested that the method of assessment be cut to 50 per cent and the tax rate doubled.

Auditor Donovan pointed out that this change could be effected only by amendment to the act of June 29, 1922, which initiated the 100 per cent valuation assessment.

The same law, incidently, fixed the ratio of Federal payments to the support of the District government at 40 per cent. While Congress has for years ignored that provision of the law, District officials are afraid to vary from the portion dealing with the tax rate.

Jordan Attorney Sues Prosecutor

In a suit filed in District Court yesterday John M. Holzsworth, a member of the New York bar and erstwhile attorney for Thomas Jordan, whose death sentence was recently reduced to life imprisonment, yesterday demanded damages of $100,000 from Leslie C. Garnett, United States attorney for the District, to whom he attributed libelous remarks.

Holzsworth said he had been a member of the bar for 24 years, and that up until June 17 he enjoyed an enviable reputation. On that date, he said, a story was printed here which reflected on his professional integrity. The story he attributed to Col. Garnett.

Holzsworth added it was largely through his efforts that Jordan, convicted slayer of Mrs. Lizzie Jaynes in the Garden-T-Shoppe holdup and murder five years ago, was saved from the electric chair.

Copeland's Carnation Temporarily Missing

For many years a carnation has been an indispensable part of his sartorial makeup. His wife sends a supply to his office several times each week.

When a reporter asked about the empty buttonhole, Copeland explained he had not yet visited his office. The day was saved when an aide hurried to the Senate with a fresh-cut blossom.

Collier Denies Indians Forced To Pawn Beads

Commissioner Is Peeved as Navajos Assail Whole New Deal Program.

Plaintive voices of Indians mingled yesterday with the sharply protesting voice of the Indian commissioner in the second day of the Navajo hearing.

The Indians said they were forced to pawn their beads to get wool, and the commissioner said that never before had he heard a series of statements more inaccurate in the essentials.

The Indians—some of whom can speak with professorial exactness, others only through interpreters—were stolid-faced and determined. The commissioner at times showed emotion in his face, and he, too, was determined. The Indians and the commissioner will face each other again this morning.

The Indians charged that the Indian Bureau policies "are destroying our nation." Commissioner John Collier said: "The Navajos are on record as approving our entire program." Coming out against the bureau yesterday were three Indians and a former United States Army colonel. They let loose little arrows of indignation, which included:

"Our reservation is overrun with Indian service employees * * * there are so many we can't count them. Under their administration our nation has hit bottom in poverty," said Scott Preston, full-blooded Navajo, through an interpreter.

"Caged for Easterners."

"We don't get relief work unless we support the Indian Bureau policies," said Robert Martin. "And we won't do that because they are destroying our nation. The bureau wants to put us in a cage for Easterners to look at."

Charles Damon said: "The bureau agents discriminate in the herd reduction program. Some of us are pawning our beads to get wool because we haven't enough sheep."

Questioned by Senator Wheeler, of Montana, Col. P. M. Anderson, Washington consultant engineer-architect, described as "unbelievably bad" engineering practices he claimed he saw while working on the Navajo Central Agency construction project in Arizona. Anderson was an Army officer during the World War. He said that he inspected "40 or 50 soil erosion projects in New Mexico and Arizona, where the expense was terrific and the waste was about 99 per cent." He referred to the projects as "nothing short of ridiculous."

Charge 3 R's Skipped.

Then the Indians, questioned by Senators Chavez and Hatch, of New Mexico, and Thomas, of Oklahoma, criticized other Indian Service activities, among these the school, soil erosion and irrigation-conservation systems. At the first day's hearing the Indians said their children were taught Navajo songs and dances to the neglect of reading, writing and arithmetic.

Yesterday the commissioner said the Federal Government is today operating 47 day schools on the Navajo Reservation, representing an increase of 37 schools in three years. Besides these there are nine institutions operated on a full or part-time boarding basis, he said.

"The fundamental purpose and curriculum of all Navajo schools is to teach spoken and written English, arithmetic and practical matters," he testified.

He challenged the delegation of Indians (14 in all), denying they represented "a substantial part of the Navajo Tribe."

Asks Authority.

"They claim to represent 57 local chapters," he said. "There are 102 local chapters, and these witnesses have not furnished evidence that they represent even one of them. I urge the committee to demand a showing of their authority."

He said the Navajo Council "is shown by record to have indorsed every major policy of the present administration, including stock reduction range control, day schools, consolidation of the six jurisdictions into one and the Navajo boundary bill." He contended that the Navajo Council had not been abolished, but rather has reorganized itself upon a more representative basis in order to gain increased power.

The 14 Navajos came here on money subscribed by members of the tribe. They don't wander about much sightseeing, but remain mostly in their room at a boarding house at 20 Third street southeast.

Financial Plight Starting, Says Snell

By the Associated Press.

Minority Leader Snell (Republican), New York, described the Government's financial situation yesterday as "startling" and urged the American people to "wake up."

Speaking on the floor of the House, he said the people should "take note of what is happening here in Washington.

"It seems to me the aim of the Administration has been the direct purpose of regimenting the people and putting into effect a planned economy, and eventually it would be easy to Sovietize this great country of ours," he said.

The national debt of $36,633,907,802, the New Yorker said, is the largest in history.

The deficit for the current year, he added, is slightly over $2,900,000,000 or "practically twice what the Administration predicted it would be."

Navy Yard Honors Retiring Foreman

Workers in the proof shop at the Navy Yard yesterday presented a wrist watch to M. Raymond O'Meara, who has just been retired from his position as foreman of the shop.

O'Meara, "quarterman" in charge of the proof shop, entered the Navy Yard 32 years ago as an apprentice. He aided in establishment of the proof shop in 1918 and had charge of it until his retirement.

In his post, O'Meara, who lives at 2905 King place northeast, directed final testing of all naval guns and gun mounts up to 6-inch caliber before they left the gun factory for service on ships.

"It Hurt Awful Bad," Says Beaten Baby

WILLIAM VAN NESS, JR.

Woman Jailed For Beating Boy With Light Cord

Housekeeper Sentenced to Year and Given Fine of $500.

In finding her guilty of assault, Judge Casey said:

"This is the worst case I have ever seen. I have difficulty in controlling my own feelings."

"Laddie" took his troubles like a "little man." It was learned, however, that he had developed a horror of his house, associating it with a month of brutal treatment.

About three weeks ago Mrs. Van Ness noticed when she came home from work that her son's face and body were bruised. Mrs. Cronin explained that he had fallen and hurt himself. The same thing happened on several occasions.

Thursday James Guice, 11, a neighbor, happened to look in one of the windows of Mrs. Cronin's apartment. As he testified in Police Court yesterday, "I saw her whip him with an electric iron cord. She picked him up by the feet and was swinging his body against the side of the bathtub."

The same afternoon Mrs. Guice heard screams coming from the Van Ness home. An hour later Mrs. Cronin called and asked her to come over. Pointing to the child, who lay apparently unconscious on the floor, Mrs. Cronin said, "This is what I have to contend with."

At 5 p. m. Mrs. Van Ness came home from work. Her son's soiled clothing was scattered around the bathroom, but neither he nor Mrs. Cronin was there. Soon both arrived with Mr. Cronin, who is employed at the Navy Yard. The child was staggering between the two grown-ups.

"What's the matter, Laddie?" his mother asked as she rushed to him.

"It Hurt Awful Bad."

"Mrs. Cronin whipped Laddie and it hurt awful bad," was the child's reply, according to his mother's testimony yesterday.

The woman refused to discuss William's injuries, merely saying to Mrs. Van Ness, "He wouldn't mind me and wouldn't come when I called, so I slapped his face." In court yesterday she steadfastly denied having beaten him.

That evening policeman Willard A. Fifield came to the house to investigate a report of a boy injured at that address. It was his second visit. Earlier in the day Mrs. Cronin had met him at the door and told him nothing was wrong.

This time Mrs. Van Ness came to the door and told of finding her son beaten. Officers of the Woman's Bureau arrested Mrs. Cronin later in the evening.

Attorney Michael Colbert was appointed by the court to defend her at yesterday's trial. Her husband was not in court. During part of the trial "Laddie" sat on the clerk's bench before the judge's stand, one eye completely closed.

Committee Favors Cut in Farm Rates

Continuation of emergency low interest rates on some farm loans and reduction of others was voted by a Senate Banking sub-committee yesterday in the face of a denunciation by President Roosevelt of the bill embodying the rates.

Despite the sub-committee's action, however, it appeared uncertain when or if the bill will be considered by the full committee. Some Senators said privately they felt there "is no great hope" of passage of the bill because of the virtual certainty it would be vetoed if sent to the President.

The bill would continue for a year the 3½ per cent interest rate on Land Bank loans and would reduce from 5 to 4 per cent for two years the interest rate on Land Bank commissioner loans.

Enough Sign Annapolis Petition To Halt Projects for All Md.

Retaliatory Move Over Office Building May Be Called Off Short of Referendum Demand; Publicity Held Sufficient.

By a Staff Correspondent.

Annapolis, Md., June 18.—It was announced here today that 10,000 signatures have been signed to a petition designed to force a referendum in November, 1938, on the $9,000,000 bond issue bill passed at the last session of the Maryland Legislature.

The announcement was made at a meeting of the committee which is fighting to have State offices now located in Baltimore concentrated in a proposed State-owned office building here in the Capital city.

The Legislature passed two bills calling for bond issues. One authorized a bond issue of $1,000,000, the money to be used for a State office building in Annapolis. The other authorized a bond issue of $9,000,000, the proceeds from which would be spent in all parts of the State for armories, bridges, hospitals and the like.

Baltimore interests circulated a petition to force a referendum on the $1,000,000 State office building bill. More than the necessary 10,000 names were signed to this and it was filed with the Secretary of State on May 28. Unless the courts intervene, the bill will have to be passed on by the electorate in the 1938 election.

In retaliation, Annapolis appointed a committee to circulate a petition to subject the $9,000,000 bond issue to a similar referendum.

Already about 6,500 names have been filed with the Secretary of State.

Rails 'Bleeding' Coal Industry, I. C. C. Is Told

Misuse of Rate, Transfer Power for Enrichment Is Charged.

By Russell Smith.

Railroad rate and transfer power has been used "to abstract from a bankrupt industry the very last penny which could be exacted to fill the coffers of the railroads," Chairman Charles F. Hosford, of the National Bituminous Coal Commission, told the Interstate Commerce Commission yesterday.

Hosford's appearance was described in a Coal Commission statement as, according to old practitioners, "the first in which a cognate quasi-judicial government body has apeeared in defense of the industry it is charged with regulating."

The chairman's action, however, followed only a few days after the Tennessee Valley Authority had filed with Congress a sweeping attack on the general rate structure of the country as prejudicial to the South, an action regarded likewise as unprecedented in the field of Government.

Hosford charged misuse of the power "to propose variations in rates, to place fuel orders and to dictate the prices for fuel coal" in his statement.

Leaders in the coal industry, in whose veracity he had confidence, Hosford said, have begged him to take a firm stand against the railroads' proposed increased freight rates because producers themselves have feared to oppose the increases publicly.

Reviewing the situation in the $3,500,000,000 bituminous industry, marked by years of losses and bankruptcies, demoralized trade practices and losing fights with competitive fuels, he contended every evidence submitted by the railroads showed they were in no such unhappy state.

"Improvement in the transportation world," he said, "has been so rapid that estimates made six months ago are completely outmoded."

There is no reason, he said, to believe this favorable trend for the railroads will not continue.

Wagner Plans Amendment to Housing Bill

Indications of a quick end to the much-criticized delay in Congressional action on the Wagner housing bill came yesterday after Senator Robert F. Wagner (Democrat), New York, the author, conferred with President Roosevelt.

The Senator saidthey had "practically reached an agreement" and that he will draft, for the President's approval, an amendment to the bill providing an "alternative" or "optional" method of providing Government aid for use of any communities that might prefer the suggested method. He declined to describe the optional method.

Delay in enactment of the measure, which has been called for by labor leaders, housing authorities and others, has centered on the subsidy plan by which the Government would be obligated to provide subsidies for 60 years. President Roosevelt has said he did not feel the present Administration should commit the Government to provide subsidies so far in the future.

The Wagner bill provides an appropriation of $50,000,000 for the first four years of the low-cost housing plan, and a bond issue of $1,000,000,000 to be loaned on projects.

The only alternative plan suggested thus far, in lieu of the subsidy plan, is that of the capital grant, by which the Government would make a first appropriation and then cease its financial aid.

Advocates of the subsidy, however, contend that the capital grant idea necessarily limits the scope of the undertaking and makes it of little benefit to the class it is designed to help, the low-income group.

Sponsors of the Wagner bill contend that the completed housing must be available to this class at not over $5 per room per month.

Social Security, Wagner Cases Lawyer Resigns Effective Aug. 1.

The Department of Justice yesterday announced Charles E. Wyzanski, the youthful special assistant who became a national celebrity with his argument for the Government of the social security and Wagner acts cases before the Supreme Court, has resigned to return to private practice of law.

Wyzanski, only 31, will return to Ropes, Gray, Boyden & Perkins, the Boston firm with which he was associated prior to his entry into Government service.

Attorney General Cummings accepted Wyzanski's resignation in the following letter:

"It is with very sincere regret that I accept your resignation as special assistant to the Attorney General and as principal attorney in the Solicitor General's division to become effective August 1, 1937.

"The work assigned to you, you have carried forward with zeal and high intelligence. As you return to private practice, you carry with you the respect and good wishes of all your associates. I shall follow your career with affectionate interest."

Cummings' letter, dated June 18, was in reply to one from Wyzanski of June 15, in which the latter said, in part:

"It has been a deep privilege to be associated with the Department of Justice under your direction and to have the opportunity of participating in important and interesting litigation. I shall always feel that my experience here has given me a breadth of vision and an abiding interest in public law."

Wyzanski came to Washington in April, 1933, to become solicitor of the Department of Labor. He represented the United States in 1935 at sessions of the International Labor Organization in Geneva.

His attachment to the Justice Department occurred in November of that year, when he was appointed to the staff of the Solicitor General. Wyzanski also argued successfully the Government's case against Grocer George W. Norris, of Broken Bow, Nebr., accused of committing perjury before a Senate committee.

District Offered 4 More Nursery Schools by WPA

Four additional WPA nursery schools for Washington will be possible if building space for them can be found, Mrs. Robert Olesen, chairman of the Nursery School Advisory Council, said last night.

"We as a group are very much interested in helping find this space and will do all we can to see that the schools are started. The WPA has made arrangements for the schools financially, with exception of rent, which is never included in their project cost," she announced.

Mrs. Olesen said that while her group cannot underwrite the rent project, it will make efforts to get the community interested and "help them get the space."

She pointed out that not "just any vacant building" will do for a nursey school. Playground space, a very large room, plumbing, gas for cooking purposes, are the minimum essential, she said.

Committee Boosts Funds for Army

By the Associated Press.

The Senate Military Committee, approving several new projects, increased to $22,993,088 yesterday its recommendation for Army housing construction to be undertaken at the earliest possible date.

The committee reported favorably a revised bill by Chairman Sheppard (Democrat), Texas, asking Congressional authority for improvements at some two-score military posts.

The committee reported to the Senate the War Department had recommended new construction costing $162,000,000, and that the $22,993,088 authorization asked represented only the most urgent of this list. Actual appropriations would be sought later.

Two Soldiers Held As Assault Suspects

Two soldiers from Fort Washington, Md., were held at the First Precinct Station last night, charged with assault with a dangerous weapon. The two men were alleged to have assaulted Earl F. Williamson, 34, of 3104 Mount Pleasant street, about midnight Thursday.

The two are William Jones, 22, and Burton Gardini, 20, both of Fort Washington. Police said witnesses identified them as the two who assaulted Williamson on G street, beating him on the head with an automobile pump. Williamson was taken to Casualty Hospital, where his condition was reported as fair.

Construction Workers In Paris Plan Strike

Paris, June 18 (AP).—Construction workers decided today to stage a general strike in the Paris region Monday afternoon. Their purpose was twofold: To show the government they desired "international unity to save the Spanish anti-Fascists," and to obtain higher wages because of increased living costs.

Robinson Slates Reorganization Bill for Senate

Determined to Press for Action, He Outlines New Changes.

Determined to press action on Government reorganization at this session of Congress, Senate Majority Leader Joseph T. Robinson yesterday outlined to the Senate Reorganization Committee new modifications in his omnibus measure, and prepared to introduce it in the Senate next week.

The bill probably will be introduced in the Senate for the first time on Tuesday, Robinson said the bill will be referred to committee, and extensive hearings held. He said "there is no reason the bill cannot be disposed of during the present session of Congress," but he would make no forecasts.

Although Robinson did not disclose details of his changes in the measure, it was said in one quarter the list of jobs subject to Senate confirmation will be greatly widened. Limitations on the Senate's confirmation powers had been widely criticized in the original plan. It was said all jobs the President designates as "policy forming" would be subject to Senate ratification. The list might include chiefs of divisions and bureaus.

Other provisions of the measure as hitherto revised remained largely unchanged. Only one new executive agency is proposed—a Department of Public Works. The Forest Service and Army Engineers would be untouched, and exemptions would be granted independent commissions. The bill still would give the President wide powers to shift, merge and eliminate other agencies.

The House Reorganization Committee meanwhile is carving a reorganization course of its own, contemplating division of the bill into four separate sections, with hearings and House action on each.

Ely Culbertson said his team's victory proved women play an excellent game. Two of the quartet are women, Mrs. Culbertson and Mrs. A. M. Sobel.

Appeals Court Rules Against Wagner Board

Marine Engineers Lose 7-1 Decision on Bargaining.

By the United Press.

Philadelphia, June 18.—An employer who settles differences with a committee of his employes is not required to deal with another bargaining agency named by the National Labor Relations Board, the United States Circuit Court of Appeals ruled late today in a 7-to-1 decision.

If an agreement satisfactory to employes is reached by the employer, the controversy becomes moot and he does not have to bargain with the outside agent named by the NLRB, the court said.

Favors Ferry Firm.

In handing down the decision, the Circuit Court refused to compel the Delaware-New Jersey Ferry Co. to recognize the Marine Engineers Beneficial Association, No. 13, as the exclusive collective bargaining agent for the company's 12 engineers.

Company attorneys told the court that the orders from the Wagner board to recognize the union were unenforceable because the dispute which led to the action before the labor board had been settled.

The labor board countered with the assertion that evidence showed that the three men on the committee with which the agreement had been made were not the "free choice" of the employes, but had been "forced upon" the other engineers.

The majority opinion was written by District Judge Oliver B. Dickinson, sitting in the absence of Judge J. Whitaker Thompson. It was concurred in by Judge Joseph Buffington, senior member of the court.

In a vigorous dissent, Judge John Biggs, jr., asserted that the provisions of the Wagner-Connery labor relations act would be destroyed unless the company was ordered to recognize the agency named by the NLRB.

Polish Amazons Force Workers to End Strike

Bialystok, Poland, June 18 (AP).—Threateningly swinging umbrellas and clubs, 500 wives and daughters today abruptly forced an end to a five-week strike of 700 workmen who had refused to accept arbitration proposals.

The men had turned down the management's offer to grant half of their demands when their women folk appeared on the scene and threatened to beat their hold-out husbands and fathers. The agreement was signed immediately and the men returned to their jobs.

Robinson Hits 'Spend-to-Save' Policy of WPA

ever known to be in history, at a time when private enterprise is, in a measure, more prosperous even than in the year 1929.

Put House in Order.

"In my opinion conditions have changed so that there is no longer the necessity for inviting projects which primarily are not work projects but are improvement projects, which ought to be carried on independently of the work relief program."

The Senator said he was not implying that the huge debt, when all circumstances are considered, endangers the credit of the United States, "but I do say that in a time of prosperity we ought to begin to put our house in order."

"It does not seem necessary to enter into a discussion of the question as to whether it will always be expedient to spend in order to save," he told the Senate. "There is something about the maxim or slogan which to my mind is somewhat inconsistent with sound principles and sound policies. Yet it must be admitted that throughout the depression liberal sums have been advanced—some have been loans, others have been grants—in the hope that such a course would promote private employment and stimulate industry and business."

Not Criticizing Projects.

While not "reflecting on the motives" of any communities, Robinson said it was apparent that the present system "is calculated to invite or provoke drafts on the Federal Treasury," as localities make the best showing possible to get liberal aid. He said there were "perhaps some projects in communities which do not require them."

Robinson insisted he was not criticizing projects that by their names appeared "simple and rather trivial, not very closely related to the public welfare," because the objective has been "first to afford assistance to those who must have it, and second to get as much advantage as may be found practicable to obtain in the appropriations we make for that purpose."

But he asked if we have "come to that state of mind in legislating that we want to encourage or even countenance indifference, lack of diligence, total lack of thrift and energy? Have we come to the point where we wish to say, 'the less you do or attempt to do the more we will do?'"

He said no one "seems to worry about the debt" any more, adding: "We spend and we spend and we spend and there are some of us who vote for all appropriations and against all taxes. I do not name anyone; sometimes I have been inclined to get in that class myself, but the point I'm making is that we cannot go on forever doing it."

Owe Obligation.

Robinson asked what would happen if another depression struck the country next year or the following year, if revenues fall off and tax sources fall off.

"We owe an obligation to the Government, to those living now and to those who will come after, to make provisions for the needy living, for those who cannot get along without assistance, but we also owe the generation to come a measure of duty."

At one point there was an acid exchange between Robinson and his majority whip, Senator James Hamilton Lewis, of Illinois. Lewis sought specific information about a Chicago airport, and asked why the Robinson amendment was necessary if the President has discretion in the amount of local contributions. Robinson sought to explain, and Lewis repeated his inquiry.

"I can give the Senator from Illinois the explanation, but Great God, I respectfully decline to give him understanding," snapped Robinson.

Vote Expected Monday.

"One can not confer that which he does not possess," returned Lewis.

Joining the Western Democratic front against the Robinson 25 per cent amendment were Senator Homer T. Bone, of Washington, and one of the so-called baby members, Senator H. H. Schwartz, of Wyoming. Schwartz, in a maiden effort, cited the Democratic platform in repressnting relief as a "national problem" and urging Senators to stand by the platform.

Senator Alva B. Adams (Democrat), Colorado, wanted to know if he thought it was "purely National," and if local communities should not bear their share.

"It is inescapably National," Schwartz replied.

A vote on the amendment by Monday was apparently assured, when Robinson obtained a unanimous agreement limiting debate. The vote will be close. Democratic opponents are forecasting defeat of the plan.

Shipbuilding Peace Success Is Partial

New York, June 18 (AP).—Mrs. Elinore M Herrick, regional director for the National Labor Relations Board, broke even today in her efforts to end shutdowns and strikes affecting 11 shipyards in the New York area and stalling a $30,000,000 building program.

She announced one big employer, the Tietjen & Lang Drydock Co., agreed to a conference Monday or Tuesday with leaders of the Industrial Marine and Shipbuilders Union, the C. I. O. affiliate which called out 15,000 workers in a fight for closed shops. But she said the refusal of the Robins Drydock Co. of Brooklyn to accept a call to a conference today "significantly thwarts out efforts toward settling the controversy in a constructive way."

Labor troubles also tied up three ships here, seventeen in Baltimore and two in Norfolk.

Soviet Fliers On Polar Hop To California

Fuel for 100 Hours.

This policy was attributed to the fact that Sigismund Levaneffsky, Russia's premier aviator, failed in a similar attempt two years ago.

Allan Bonnalie, national aeronautical representative in Oakland, was requested to be ready Sunday morning to check the plane's instruments. The plane had sufficient fuel for 100 hours in the air and food for three days.

He was told the plane was a Russian-built craft, type ANT 25, with a single 12-cylinder motor, and that it carried 2,000 gallons of gasoline, almost as much as the largest four-motored clipper planes which fly heavy loads across the Pacific.

The Russian plane has red wings and gray fuselage, marked U. R. S. S., the letter N and the figures 025. It carries a 20-watt radio transmitter. Its call letters are "RETET."

The members of the crew were listed as:

The crew, with a combined weight of 528 pounds, had 1,276 pounds of equipment.

Weighs 24,750 Pounds.

Bonnalie heard the ship weighed 24,750 pounds fully loaded, including a fuel and oil weight of 13,760 pounds.

The largest clipper planes weigh about 52,000 pounds fully loaded, and carry normal fuel loads of around 2,000 gallons plus reserves of 400 gallons.

The Russian plane's 2,000 gallons was deemed sufficient for 100 hours in the air, but the speed of the ship was not given. The first position report indicated the fliers had covered possibly 2,000 miles in their first 18 hours.

Authorities differed as to the exact distance involved. The Navy Hydrographic Office here estimated the route at 6,000 miles. The Coast and Geodetic Survey in Washington said the flight would cover 5,880 miles.

In any event it would exceed the nonstop long-distance record of 5,637 miles established in August, 1935, by the Frenchmen Paul Codas and Maurice Rossi in their hop from New York to Syria.

American Army and Canadian stations listening for the Russian plane's signals were asked to flash weather reports to the fliers. Army stations at Fairbanks, Juneau and Ketchikan, Alaska, were ordered to begin sending the report hourly at 9 p. m. (Eastern standard time) tonight.

Fly Near North Pole.

Washington reports said the fliers might consider stopping for a refueling at the newly established Russian floating air base at the North Pole, but would make every effort to complete the flight without landing.

Weather in the polar region was reported overcast and misty, with visibility less than three miles.

Although previously announced Soviet plans indicated Levaneffsky would have the honor of attempting the flight, Bonnalie's information indicated the famous flier was not in the crew.

The perilous route called for about 1,000 miles of overland flying from Moscow to the Kola Peninsula, northeasternmost tip of Soviet Russia, then 1,000 miles to Victoria Island, Franz Josef Land, and finally 1,616 miles over sea and ice to Prince Patrick Island off the north Canadian coast.

This route falls short of the North Pole, the Navy Hydrographic Office said, but Canadian advices indicated they might head close to the world's top and then veer to a more southerly line toward Edmonton.

Chkalov, the 33-year-old pilot of the flight, is the son of a fireman on a Volga boat. He joined the Red army when 15 years old. After the revolution he entered a pilots' school and became an army flier. For heroism and quick thinking as a test pilot he was decorated in 1935 with the highest Soviet award, the Order of Lenin. For a long-distance flight last year he was awarded the title "Hero of the Soviet Union."

Fliers All "Heroes."

Baidukov, the co-pilot, is the 30-year-old son of a repair worker on the Omsk Railway in Siberia. He ran away from home when 8 years old and was expelled from a children's home for his "rebellious character." He first saw a plane when he was 18, went to Leningrad and became an expert flier. He is a close friend of Chkalov and, like him, has been awarded the Order of Lenin and the title of "Hero."

Beliakov, the navigator, is the old head of the expedition—40. His father teaches on a collective farm in the Moscow area. Alexander graduated from high school in 1915, attended military school and served in the World War. He commanded the chemical service of an artillery division during the revolution, and afterward entered an air navigation school. Now he is professor of air navigation in the military air academy, and a "Hero of the Soviet Union."

None of the fliers speaks English. They have never previously been in the United States.

Flying in "Magnetic Jungle."

Los Angeles, June 18 (AP).—The Soviet airmen flying from Moscow to San Francisco are piercing a "magnetic and mathematical jungle" where some of their instruments will perform weird gymnastics and finally cease to function altogether, a celebrated navigator explained today.

"They've got the most exciting job in the world," commented Lieut. Commander Clarence S. Williams. "This is immensely important history they are making."

Williams is considered one of the world's foremost experts in the science of navigation. Amelia Earhart is following a route around the world over which they conferred before she started.

"This flight over the pole is the supreme effort," Williams said. "The navigator will have to work like a fiend, figuring his directional problems.

"Take an ordinary magnetic compass. The directional force for it comes from the poles. It points due north.

"But as it approaches the North Pole, the force gradually diminishes. Aviators who have flown in Alaska and the sub-Arctic regions tell me that their compasses take to flirting with islands, at such times.

"They point at one island, as the plane approaches it. Then they point to another, and then another. They jump all over the place. They point everywhere, except at the pole."

Directly over the North Pole, he said, the directional pull would cease altogether.

failed to substantiate their daughter's contention that her marriage to Nash was not legal, because of her earlier marriage.

"That marriage was annulled two years ago, Mr. Woolard said, "because of her youth."

Mrs. Nash, who declared to reporters on leaving Secretary Swanson's office that she would "take this matter higher in the Navy," said in discussing her first marriage.

Justice of the Peace Charles A. Rushin, when interviewed yesterday, according to the Associated Press, said that he had married Kathleen Woolard and Oren Anderson on July 23, 1935.

Anderson, he said, now lives in Pasadena, Calif. Rushin said Anderson's mother, Mrs. Sallie Fennell, still lives in Glenville, Ga.

Saginaw, Mich., June 18 (AP).—Charles A. Nash, jr., of Saginaw, who lost his ensign commission for marrying before graduation from the United States Naval Academy, said tonight there was no chance of a reconciliation between him and his bride.

Nash set out today to hunt for a job and returned saying he had received several offers but had accepted none yet.

"From the day of our marriage Miss Woolard threatened me with revelation of our wedding to naval authorities," young Nash said. "In the meantime, she intimated that our marriage was illegal and that she could have it annulled but wasn't going to do anything about it.

ceived $250,000 from the General Investment Co. He had acted as their agent in selling a subway to Buenos Aires.

The General Investment Co. had turned the quarter million over to a Bahamas corporation named Philip De Ronde, Ltd., which had been formed three months before, said Irey. He received the money—a check for $100,000 and $150,000 in currency. He told the S.E.C. he turned this money over to the Philip De Ronde Corporation, "who disposed of it in various manners." He is an officer and director, but not a stockholder of this corporation, but he refused to name the stockholders, saying "they constitute a group of Argentine, Paraguayan and English friends of mine."

Magill said: "It would appear that he made a false, fraudulent effort to compromise with the Treasury on his back taxes." The Justice Department has the case under advisement.

Bache's "Honest Conviction."

Jules Bache, member of the board of trustees of the Metropolitan Museum of Art, was presented in a different light by Irey, who said "Mr. Bache apparently acted with an honest conviction he was within his rights." Bache utilized foreign corporations, two in Canada and one in the Bahamas, to escape taxation, borrowing money from one of the companies and deducting heavily from his tax returns for "interest paid to a corporaton he personally owned." He did this for the last three years, reducing his returns to nontaxable status in 1934 and 1936 and paying a small tax in 1935.

The case of Wallace Groves, Irey said, "is a very much more doubtful case from a legal standpoint. . . . He has been in constant litigation with the Bureau of Internal Revenue for many years. . . . Groves, acting through his personal corporation, Nassau Securities, Ltd. (in the Bahamas), bought stock from the stockholders of General Investment Corporation and sold the same stock to General Investment Corporation at a profit of $14 a share."

Hudson's transactions, on the other hand, Magill and Irey agreed, "seem to fall within the letter of the law." He used a foreign corporation "to escape surtaxes on dividends," it was stated.

Schick's "Dispensation."

Schick, according to the officials, became a Canadian citizen by "special dispensation" from the Canadian Prime Minister, as he had not lived in Canada for the required five years. He had founded four Bahamas corporations to which he transferred the stock of his American plant at New Haven, Conn., and his change of citizenship was necessary to escape taxation on such transactions.

Laughton's action was perfectly legal, Irey said, as he is a British subject. He formed a personal holding company in England and had his salary paid into it directly, amounting to $190,000 in 1935. The company then paid him a salary of $20,000. He paid a small income tax on his personally owned holding company, but escaped the larger amount.

The hearings, which were adjourned until 10 a. m. Tuesday, will continue with further sample cases of various types of tax evasion, committee members were informed. Chairman Doughton, of the joint group, will ask for $50,000 to continue the committee's work.

Sea Search Urged By Air for Body Of Mrs. Parsons

By the Associated Press.

Stony Brook, N. Y., June 18.—While professing to be without information concerning the fate of the missing Alice McDonell Parsons, District Attorney L. Barron Hill tonight announced he would request that an aerial search be made of the waters of Long Island Sound.

The prosecutor said he would ask Inspector Harold R. King, of the adjoining Nassau County police force, for the use of a glass-bottomed plane, from which observers could see a body floating below the surface.

A search already was under way of lower New York Harbor for a woman's body reported seen floating 4 miles south of the narrow entrance to the upper harbor. A Coast Guard plane and two police boats were engaged in the search.

Efforts to learn whether any further messages similar to the $25,000 ransom demand found shortly after Mrs. Parsons disappeared from her squab farm here June 9 developed the information that Federal agents were intercepting all mail addressed to the family.

The investigation was extended to the island of Martha's Vineyard, off Massachusetts, when Federal agents, hurried from New York and Boston, joined State police in a hunt for an unidentified man who telephoned State police Mrs. Parsons was in the island village of Chilmark.

Spanish government ports—if his navy is sufficiently strong. He would have the advantages of international law to support military activities. Belligerents have the right to halt and search merchantmen.

There was one indication of Spanish government belief that the status of belligerents would be accorded Franco's insurgent regime: The Basque government delegation charged in Paris that Great Britain had withdrawn protection from merchant ships which have been evacuating Bilbao refugees.

International law experts pointed out that if Franco eventually should conquer all of Spain, Britain would be placed in an embarrassing position unless belligerent rights of the insurgents had been recognized. Resultant unfriendliness, they said, might jeopardize commercial contracts Britain holds in Spain.

104 Americans Believed Dead.

Rome, June 18 (U.P.).—One hundred and four Americans, volunteers in the Spanish loyalist armies, were believed to have drowned when the loyalist steamship Ciudad de Barcelona sank in the Mediterranean recently, the Giornale d'Italia said tonight. The Fascist newspaper said that, in addition to the Americans, 900 other foreign volunteers probably were lost.

Leftists Call C. I. O. Labor Party Basis

Napanoch, N. Y., June 18 (AP).—Two left wing presidential candidates in the last election tonight hailed the Committee for Industrial Organization as the foundation stone for a labor party in the United States but differed in some of the details.

Earl Browder, Communist, urged formation of a farmer-labor party as "the American equivalent of the People's Front in France." Norman Thomas, socialist, disagreed on the necessity for a popular front but agreed that the C.I.O. was the route a labor party must take.

WJSV to Move Radio Station To Maryland

Columbia Also Asks Permit to Increase Power to 50,000 Watts.

The Columbia Broadcasting System, through its affiliated Washington station, WJSV, yesterday asked the Federal Communications Commission for permission to increase its power from 10,000 watts to 50,000 watts and to relocate its transmitter from the present site on the Memorial Highway in Alexandria, Va., to a proposed site in Montgomery County, Md.

Harry C. Butcher, vice president of the C. B. S., in charge of the Washington office, estimated the cost of the project, including the removal to the new location and the new 50,000-watt transmitter, at $270,000.

According to Clyde Hunt, chief engineer of WJSV, the proposed increase in power, would result in greatly increased coverage for the local C. B. S. outlet, as well as a better signal strength for local and nearby suburban WJSV listeners. The Chesapeake Bay area, always a problem with local radio broadcasting stations, will receive an improved and clearer reception. It is estimated, by Hunt, that the proposed increase will bring into fold an additional 8,780 square miles with its attendant listeners. The radius at the present time is about 35 miles, and this would mean an increase in radius of between 25 and 30 miles.

Although the present coverage in square miles is approximately 5,000 for the primary signal, WJSV's reception in some parts of New York State is on par with that vicinities' local broadcasting units.

Another advantage, in respect to radio patronage, will be the effectiveness of the Anacostia receiving sets. In this section of the city where the radio division of the Naval Research Laboratories is located, a clear signal from WJSV was unavailable because of Columbia's compliance with the wishes of the Navy Department to the effect that WJSV's transmitter should not interfere with that of Research Laboratory, which is directly across the river.

Bishop Hughes Defends 'Younger Generation'

Lynchburg, Va., June 18 (AP).—Bishop Edwin H. Hughes, of Washington, a veteran Methodist Episcopal Church leader, vigorously defended the younger generation in an address last night before the Virginia conference pastors' school at Randolph-Macon Woman's College.

He scoffed at those who shake their heads over modern people, recalling that all preceding younger generations have been looked upon in a similar manner.

"No generation of any time has ever been in need of sympathy such as this one," Bishop Hughes said. "The reason is, you have to be introduced into the most lurid, the most complex world any young people have ever entered."

Another Blow To Disarmament.

Anglo-American efforts, extending over two years, to salvage something from the wreckage of the Washington and London naval limitation treaties, now stand revealed as a flat failure.

Last year, after the Japanese government had denounced the two pacts and resumed its freedom of action in the field of naval construction, the rump of the naval conference meeting at London did manage to draw up an agreement providing for qualitative though not for quantitative limitation. But even this limited success was threatened by the non-co-operative attitude of Japan and other powers.

Recently, the United States sought to secure from the naval powers that have not signed the 1936 London treaty consent to a plan to reduce gun calibers on capital ships from 16 inches, as at present, to 14 inches. Whatever answer, if any, the great European powers have made to this suggestion has not been revealed. Japan's reply, however, is a flat refusal. The Tokyo government has informed Washington it will have nothing to do with limiting the size of armaments on battleships without a quantitative reduction in naval tonnages.

It would be unwarranted, however, to conclude from this that there will be, as between Japan on the one hand and the United States and Great Britain on the other, an unrestrained race in armaments. For its part, this Nation is determined to maintain the Washington treaty ratios. While, for reasons of pride, Japan may turn down all pleas for naval limitation, unless she is permitted parity with the United States, it is problematical whether the island empire will take the initiative in markedly expanding its naval forces.

In a race in which the sky is the limit Japan is certain to be hopelessly outdistanced. No one knows this better than the Japanese government and the Japanese admirals.

Cincinnatus Of France.

Gaston Doumergue, dead at the age of 73, was France's Cincinnatus of the present decade. Like Clemenceau, "The Tiger," whom he resembled in few other particulars, Doumergue reached the apex of his career at an advanced age and after his political activity appeared to be definitely over.

It was Clemenceau's ferocity which made him the man of the hour in 1917. In Doumergue's case it was the possession of an unfailing good humor and friendliness which led to his recall from retirement to pilot the troubled French ship of state in the critical days of 1934.

Despite many years in public life, Doumergue managed to make singularly few enemies. That is, perhaps, why he was chosen in 1934 to become President of the republic, though abler and stronger men were his rivals for that post. And there can be no doubt that, with his moderation and his freedom from party passions, Doumergue did perform a very needed task in easing a critical situation.

As a result of the Stavisky scandal and the bloody rioting of February 6, 1934, France was threatened by chaos. But under Doumergue's benign leadership all parties, except those on the extreme Right and Left, rallied to form a national government and thus averted more serious disturbances.

For this great service Doumergue will be long and gratefully remembered by the people of France. Not a great man, in any sense of the term, he was unquestionably the right man for the job of binding his nation's wounds and preventing the destruction of democracy in France.

Fire And Police Promotions.

The District Commissioners are entirely right in proposing to the Civil Service Commission that the system of promoting Washington firemen and policemen be revised. Since the suggested modifications have the approval of both Maj. Brown and Chief Engineer Schrom, the commission should have no hesitancy in adopting them.

One change would be elimination of the so-called "I. Q." tests from the promotion examinations. These have proved serious obstacles to the advancement of older men whose school days are far behind them. Under the new arrangement, promotion would be made as a result of practical examinations coupled with consideration of the applicants' fitness and experience.

Another change would occur in the timing of promotions. Where today a private in either department may try for a sergeant's rank after five years of service, under the proposed revision he would be required to serve eight years. Similarly, a sergeant would have to serve four years instead of two before seeking a lieutenancy, and a lieutenant three years instead of one before seeking a captaincy.

Both changes should result in better seasoned men in the officer ranks of both departments, thus strengthening our fire and police protection.

A District Chain Store Tax?

By a vote of 131 to 53 the House has incorporated in the District tax bill a graduated chain-store levy patterned after the Louisiana law recently upheld by the Supreme Court. Whatever arguments may be found to support the legality of such tax measures, they are vicious in principle and a very uncertain source of income. Under the pretense of raising revenue, this proposed tax would, in fact, penalize the large chains by imposing a tax upon each unit, graded not with reference to the profits or volume of business of the individual store, or even all the stores located in the District, but in accordance with the number of stores controlled throughout the United States.

Thus one chain with over 15,000 stores scattered throughout the country would have to pay $550 on each local establishment regardless of the net profits or the volume of business done by those stores. A competitor with two, three or five stores would pay only $10 on each. A punitive tax of this outrageously discriminatory character would result in closing many small neighborhood branches of the larger chains with resultant loss of revenue to the District.

An erratic imposition of this sort obviously cannot be upheld as a means of correcting competitive inequalities between the chains and their competitors. In fact, it is not even an anti-chain store tax but a tax that would favor local chains against those with interstate ramifications.

In upholding the Louisiana tax, the Supreme Court majority indulged in some very specious economic reasoning to justify the method of graduating the levies. Unless we assume, as the judges apparently did, that the chains enjoy special competitive advantages in the form of secret rebates, allowances and brokerage fees, which increase as the number of stores grow, it is difficult to find any economic justification for the great differences in the payments required. If the chains are guilty of using discriminatory business methods, the laws regulating trade practices, especially the Robinson-Patman act, should be invoked. It is sheer nonsense to pretend that competitive inequalities, fair or unfair, would be eliminated by arbitrarily graded levies of the sort proposed.

The chains and the tax collectors are not the only interests affected by this proposal. Consumers will undoubtedly have a good deal to say when they understand that a punitive tax measure threatens to cut down the number of relatively cheap retail outlets selling food, drugs and other articles of mass consumption in the District. The consumer would suffer not alone through a closing of convenient neighborhood branches of the large chains, but also through a rise in prices to compensate for the higher taxes imposed.

It seems the height of irresponsibility for the House to incorporate in the District tax bill a measure of such importance without previously allowing ample time for considering its probable effect upon distributors as well as consumers. However, the procedure followed in dealing with the tax bill as a whole has been so amazingly irresponsible and has revealed such disregard of the interests of local residents that the proposed chain-store levy can only be regarded as one in a series of colossal blunders.

An Unjustified Subsidy.

It is to be hoped that the Senate will be more amenable to reason than was the House in considering the Jones bill for a continuation of abnormally low interest rates on Federal land bank loans. The House passed the bill over the protest of Gov. Myers of the Farm Credit Administration and in face of President Roosevelt's direct appeal for its rejection. The President's letter sent some time ago to Chairman Jones, of the House Agriculture Committee, but only now made public in an effort to influence the Senate vote, strongly supports the position taken by Gov. Myers.

The emergency which justified a temporary reduction in land bank interest rates is virtually a thing of the past. The rank and file of farmers are in a position to meet reasonable interest charges. Consequently, there is no sort of justification for continuing to bestow interest subsidies upon this favored group constituting less than 10 per cent of the Nation's farmers.

Furthermore, in individual cases of hardship resulting from drought or other disasters, a mere reduction in interest rates seldom provides the amount or the kind of relief required. As Gov. Myers says, it is frequently necessary to extend the time for payment of the entire amount due and even advance funds to meet taxes and insurance premiums.

To maintain abnormally low interest rates on Federal farm loans would also establish a dangerous precedent, making it increasingly difficult for other Government lending agencies, such as the HOLC, to resist attempts to beat down interest rates. The result would be to encourage an unwise concentration of credit in subsidized agencies and to hamper the extension of private financing on a sound and reasonable basis.

Apart from these strong arguments against the Jones bill, President Roosevelt rightly stresses the cost of keeping rates abnormally low, thereby forcing the FCA to draw upon the Treasury to cover income deficiencies. If the bill should pass, it is estimated that during the coming fiscal year more than $40,000,000 would be required from the Treasury to finance it. With the need for emergency refinancing of farm indebtedness fast disappearing, there is no valid excuse for adding to the budgetary deficit in order to subsidize farmers who do not need aid.

Of No Aid To Strikers.

In spite of reports to the contrary, the issue of Government aid to strikers is not likely to arise in the present industrial conflict. The statement of David Niles, assistant WPA administrator, to the effect that no distinction will be drawn between strikers and nonstrikers in the administration of relief may serve to strengthen the morale of men on picket lines. But it is not likely to put any food on their tables.

The question as to whether the Government should support men who have voluntarily left their jobs became largely academic when the policy of work relief was adopted. At present the WPA does not provide any direct relief. The only way in which strikers could live at the expense of Federal taxpayers would be to obtain WPA jobs. That, of course, would remove them from picket lines and might jeopardize their chance of being re-employed at the conclusion of the walkout.

Before anyone can obtain a WPA job he must register with the United States Employment Service. The fact that he is in need and employable must be certified by a local board. Then he must wait for an opening in connection with some project which can use the type of work he is equipped to do. No special projects are being undertaken in the strike areas. Since the WPA already has waiting lists in most localities and, since it is gradually reducing its rolls, the chances that any substantial number of strikers will be able to obtain aid in this way are virtually nil.

In simple justice to those who are unable to find work of any kind, temporary jobs at the expense of taxpayers and direct relief should be reserved for individuals who are not voluntarily idle. That rule seems to be a widely established principle, except in the United States. However, all of the unemployment insurance acts adopted by the States, as part of our social security system, forbid the payment of benefits to persons on strike. That is a thoroughly wise principle. To have the Government supporting any group which might choose to strike for any purpose would be utterly unreasonable. It would put the Government in the position of encouraging strikes instead of peaceful settlement of industrial disputes.

As a matter of sound national policy, therefore, the WPA should amend its practice of drawing no distinction between strikers and nonstrikers, even though the issue seems to be of no immediate importance in the current dispute.

Taxation For Defense.

Although authorized to borrow £400,000,000 over a five-year period to help finance an extraordinary rearmament program, Prime Minister Chamberlain, until recently chancellor of the exchequer, was not content to balance Great Britain's regular budget by voting an increase in the standard rate of the income tax. He undertook also to tap new sources of revenue to offset anticipated increases in defense expenditures during the next few years.

Mr. Chamberlain's first plan to impose a graduated tax upon the growth of profits was severely attacked because it would have borne very heavily upon industries in the early stages of recovery as well as upon those enjoying excessive profits from armaments outlays. Convinced of the force of such criticisms, he modified and then withdrew his original proposal. Now his successor as chancellor of the exchequer, Sir John Simon, has come forward with a third proposal, clearly indicating that Mr. Chamberlain's deference to his critics was by no means a weak surrender of his main objective. The substitute measure calls for a uniform 5 per cent levy upon business profits, expected to yield as much or more than the original proposal and a good deal more than the revised plan.

With British income taxes assessed at 25 per cent (standard rate), it undoubtedly takes great courage to "put on the screws" to the tune of £25,000,000 yearly over a five-year period. That the Chamberlain government is prepared to do so shows the great importance attached to a strong budgetary position.

It has been the misfortune, not the fault, of the present prime minister that his efforts to maintain a balanced budget have been thwarted by political developments making an ambitious rearmament program seem unavoidable. With British taxes already close to the war-time scale, the full cost of the rearmament program could not be financed from new revenue. But businesses which benefit from the defense program will be compelled to share more of their gains with the government.

The British taxpayer's capacity to take punishment and the willingness of responsible government officials to risk inflicting it is one of that country's most striking characteristics. The British are both an example and a warning to other nations whose lavishness in spending is only rivaled by their backwardness in trying to find new sources of tax revenue to prevent deficits from rising and debts from steadily expanding.

New Naval Hospital.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: We note in the press that an appropriation for a new Naval hospital is imminent.

This should be located on high, undeveloped land near the center of the city and on an arterial highway. Such a location is available north of Maryland avenue extended, and east of Bladensburg road. This land is adjacent to the Arboretum, is high—about elevation 140, from which the city can be viewed in all directions, and below which flows the Anacostia River, along whose banks stretches Anacostia park.

The proposed parkway between Washington and Baltimore enters the city via Maryland avenue and would make this site accessible to all points north and east. From this area streets radiate to all parts of the District of Columbia. This ideal location is only two miles east of the Capitol, and being out of the congested area would relieve traffic congestion. DILWORTH POWELL.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Why have the heads of the Paramount Film Co. decided not to show the films of the Memorial Day police massacre of the steel workers in Chicago?

They say it is because "the film is a tense and nerve-racking episode . . . not fit to be seen."

What distorted code of morals have they called upon to back them in their censorship of these documentary films of the Chicago massacre—the facts that the American people should see about this shocking crime?

Are they afraid to let the American people see the truth?

Housing Solution.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Of all the socialistic and paternalistic schemes sponsored by the brain trusters, the Wagner-Steagall housing bill is the worst. There is absolutely nothing in the Constitution, nor in the nature of the problem of providing decent dwellings at reasonable rentals, that justifies taking the money of Maine, Ohio or Montana farmers and using it for the benefit of the poorer classes of New York City.

There is in reality no "housing problem." What is wrongly so called is a land and tenant problem. The slum tenements exist because of our foolish laws, that fine heavily builders of decent dwellings, while taxing lightly the old dilapidated tumbledown structures which keep out of use valuable city lots.

Exempt from taxation all new buildings, take by taxes all rental values of the land, and the slums will quickly disappear.

Puerto Rico Unrest.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Various disturbing elements lie at the roots of the politico-social situation confronting the government of Puerto Rico. First and foremost is the sheer physical element: slightly less than 4,000 square miles must provide for nearly three and a quarter million souls; secondly, the inequitable distribution of land holdings; thirdly, lack of local industries so that the vast majority of the population are underpaid agricultural workers who at best earn a bare subsistence.

To bring about the economic rehabilitation of a people laboring under such a load, seemingly increasing in weight with each passing year, is indeed a herculean task. Based on unbiased reports, the Puerto Rico Reconstruction Administration is conceded to be doing a good job; but one must remember that insuperable difficulties take a long time to overcome. In the circumstances it is not surprising that "anarchic influences" would spring from the very shortcomings that are bound to result.

I am convinced that the large majority of our fellow citizens in the Caribbean are proud of being part of this great Nation, realizing that the positive benefits gained thereby far outweigh the evanescent hopes and futile mirage of a misguided demagogue.

Income Tax History.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Mr. Benjamin Ginzburg in a letter of June 10 states that Justice Fields' undue continuation as a Supreme Court justice caused the income tax law to be held unconstitutional.

Please allow me to state the facts. At the first trial of the income tax law Justice Howell E. Jackson was ill and absent, the eight justices present divided equally, four to four. Later Justice Jackson returned to duty, a rehearing occurred and Justic Jackson supported the law. But Justice George Shiras, who had voted to sustain the law on the first trial, changed his mind and voted against it on the second hearing, thereby overthrowing the law by a vote of 5 to 4.

It is, therefore, an irrefutable fact that the change of mind by Justice Shiras caused the law to be declared unconstitutional. W. D. PECK.

President Taxed.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: When "Taxpayer" says the President never pays any Federal tax, he has a bad case of "tantrumitis." If he had taken a few minutes off in composing the letter, he would have found that the Revenue Act of 1934 provides in part as follows:

In the case of Presidents of the United States and judges of courts of the United States taking office after June 6, 1932, the compensation received as such should be included in gross income; and all acts fixing the compensation of such Presidents and judges are hereby amended accordingly.

Thus the present President has always paid a Federal income tax just as you and I. J. F. GROSS.

Soviet Executions.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: If the Soviet executes a million more Fascists, it would be better than to have that awful thing happen to it as it did to democratic Spain.

Had the Popular Front of Spain, after its election, been as alert as the Soviets, it would have immediately nipped the Fascists' plot in the bud by removing all Fascist-minded elements from responsible positions, and Spain could have saved all the blood she is pouring today. She could have prevented both the rebellion and invasion. This should be a good lesson to all the world's democracies.

The U. S. S. R. is the strongest adversary of fascism, because it is ruled by the working people. It was Lenin who taught them that to purge the party occasionally does not weaken but strengthens it. Hence the necessary purge.

"Degenerating" Stock.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Since when has "danger" been stopping the U. S. mail? I have lived since "pony express" days and have seen with regret the steady degeneration of the American stock.

I do not believe the Administration realizes that it is rapidly drifting into communism. But I do know that by its supine attitude it is encouraging communism. It is certainly storing up enough trouble for future Administrations. It is always easier and more peaceful to drift with the current until you get in the grip of the rapids and then . . .

Senate Judiciary Report.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Thank God freedom has not failed us but has asserted itself and found expression in the historic document presented to the Senate of the United States by the Judiciary Committee condemning in unanswerable logic the proposal to pack the Supreme Court and destroy its independence. This report is a clarion declaration of freedom's rebirth and gives assurance that Government in these United States at least, of the people, for the people shall not perish from the earth.

Mr. Edgerton States His Case.

To the Editor of the Post—Sir: I feel that I owe it to my sense of outraged decency to express to you a vigorous protest against such a species of journalism as I saw displayed on the front page of your issue of June 12. I was made the victim of a series of misrepresentations under the wholly false headline, "Mill Owner Upholds $11 Weekly Pay."

In a very carefully prepared statement, which required 35 minutes for me to present to the Labor Committees of the Senate and House, sitting jointly in a public hearing on the Black-Connery labor standards bill, I undertook to make clear the positions of both myself and the organization of which I am president on this bill. That statement, which was left with the committees, constituted my testimony. Yet not a word of the statement was published by your paper. Instead a garbled report of some of the answers to some of the silly and altogether asinine questions asked me by two members of the committees following my testimony, was given derisively as the ostensible substance of what I said.

I distinctly stated loud enough for any half-deaf person to hear that I was not a mill owner. I did not at any point "uphold" a "$11 weekly pay." The only possible basis for such a contemptuous and false headlining was my answer to the question: "Mr. Edgerton, assuming that some bill is going to be passed which will fix a standard weekly wage, what would you suggest as the proper one?" My clear answer was that if such a bill must be passed, speaking quite personally and not for my organization, I would suggest $11 or $12 as one which might be acceptable. I upheld no wage.

And not once did I "mumble" anything, "sputter," "twitch," or show any bad humor. Nor was there the slightest justification for referring to me with manifest derisiveness as a "praying textile employer." While I am proud of the fact that I do often pray, as all Christians should, no reference to that fact was made on this occasion, and the word prayer was not used once.

The textile corporation, of which I am chief executive, has never in its history had the slightest friction with its employes. In answer to one of the relevant and intelligent questions asked me by a member of the committee, I stated, also loud enough for an attentive reporter to hear, that this corporation has been operating on the basis of a 40-hour week for several years, and that since our code was written the minimum wage in this plant has continuously been $13 per week. Then, being asked if had ever paid less than $13, I stated that several years ago we had paid a few aged women, mothers or grandmothers of our employes, as low as $6 per week for specially assigned easy tasks reserved for those largely incapacitated by age or other disability. But not one word of such pertinent parts of my answers to reasonable questions was included in the ridiculous report which you published.

In my opinion, such unfair, prejudiced and intolerant attitudes on the part of influential papers as that evidenced by your paper on this occasion are doing more than anything else in these troublous times to create the atmosphere of class distinction and hate which make more difficult the sane solutions of our many perplexing questions.

Dinner Parties.

WHEN dinner was over George found two chairs beneath a lantern in a corner of the garden. Sitting opposite the German girl, he regretted the ease with which college German vocabularies had escaped him. But it did not matter because the German girl's English was as good as his.

"Is this your first visit to America?" he asked.

"Yes."

"Tell me what you think of it, of Washington. I'd really like to know, and I promise not to be offended at the truth."

"First, I am impressed with the size of America. Then I am impressed with the ease and security of everyone I have met. You see, in Europe that is not so. There everyone is afraid of war, here everyone is busy, is having a good time and no one thinks of war. And I can see why that is possible. You have your own problems of course, but they are not the same as ours. You have this enormous country, this enormous ocean separating you from Europe, and there is no necessity for armed borders.

"I can see, too, why you have no need for fascism or national socialism or whatever you choose to call it. If someone in Cleveland gets up and says, 'We don't agree with the President,' it doesn't make any difference. Everything goes on just the same. But in our country it is different. If a small minority opposes the government it does make a difference; our country is very small compared with yours, our borders must be protected, and the German people are compelled to unity. In Germany right now people are waiting for the latest news of Spain's civil war, but here it doesn't seem to matter. Do you understand that? It is important to us because of what it might mean to all Europe."

"Yes," George said. 'But tell me, what do the German people think will happen to Germany when Herr Hitler dies?"

"Let us hope that will be a long time. No one knows, of course, but we think the spirit of German unity will always go on. It is being bred into German boys and girls from the age of ten years on, in camps, in the 'youth movement,' and all that."

"Wouldn't it further assure Herr Hitler's principles if he restored the German monarchy? Isn't it true that the German people are monarchial in temperament?"

"Yes, I think the latter is true. But it would be very difficult to restore the monarchy. A strong man, suitable to the whole country would have to be found. If the Hohenzollerns were brought back that would suit the Prussians, but at once the Bavarians would want their king back too. The old duchies would want their grand dukes. And all of this would probably work against, and not for, our national unity."

"Well," George said, "that's all very interesting. Now tell me what one learns in German schools about America. Are you taught American history and geography and all that?"

"Oh, yes. When I was in school I learned about the American Revolution and the Civil War. I learned the names of generals, like Generals Lee and Jackson and Grant. We learned about some American Presidents, and usually one or two things for which they were most noted."

"What do you have from American literature?"

"Nothing, I'm sorry to say. But I have read 'Gone With the Wind,' and I liked it very much. I read it in English and the Negro dialect was very hard for me. I am sure it will be translated into German. We already have 'Anthony Adverse' in German."

"What languages did you have in school?"

"I learned English and French rather well. And then I learned to read Latin and Old Greek. I can't speak Italian, but when I am in Italy I can understand it from the Latin I know. You see, there again it is necessary for Europeans to know several languages. Here you have only one, and when you go abroad you can nearly always find someone who can speak English. So it is really very easy for you.

"But you asked me first what I think of America, and I can hardly tell you how I really feel about it. I like it, of course, and I find it quite pleasant to fit into the American national philosophy."

"And what is the American national philosophy?"

"Oh, to work, to work hard, but not to worry too much. Always to have a good time. To spend what you make having a good time. To think of war as something that has happened but that won't happen again. I think America is marvelous for young people, for those who can keep up with the tide. But I am not sure I should want to grow old here."

"And why do you think that?"

"Because from what I have seen of it I am afraid America is a little cruel to the old and to those who don't 'belong.' But it is wonderful when you are young, and have a place, and aren't afraid."

From the house the sound of music reached them in the garden.

"Shall we dance?" George asked.

Fair Enough

By Westbrook Pegler

One-Sided Liberals.

QUITE A FEW of our heavy-duty philosophers have been saying lately that the steel trouble is not a mere dispute but a war, and in that case the Army and Navy should be notified at once, because war is supposed to be their business and not an affair for the cops, the Elks and the parent-teachers association.

War should be a national affair, not a private enterprise, and it is against the safety of the country to permit an independent war to proceed within its borders, scuffing up the countryside and interfering with the innocent activities of the citizens.

However, the term "war" in this case seems to be merely a convenient figure of speech selected to justify outrage, accidental damage and violations incidental to a fight which has gone out of control. It is, rather oddly, the pet alibi of all those labor fakers and pub-crawling liberals who are all for law and order and who can bleed for the civil rights of the Puerto Ricans, but in the event of excessive conduct committed under orders by a union say, "Too bad, it's war!"

It is my rather juvenile belief that violation of law or a denial of civil liberties is as bad on one side as on another, and there I see no choice between coercion by Henry Ford and coercion by someone from Union Square. And while it is easy to agree that labor has taken a terrible beating from the Harlan deputies and other spectatcular animals of the Nazi stripe, it is impossible to indorse rough stuff against nominally free American workmen, even though it be done ostensibly for their own good.

* * * *

AGREED that no employer has a right to punish a man for joining a union, it follows that nobody else has a right to tell him that, by God, he must, and that if he doesn't join and pay tribute out of his earnings he won't be allowed to work at all. If the employer has no right—and the law says he has no right—to snoop and spy on the man's private affairs and harass him and his wife, and maybe pat him on the head with a sawed-off pool cue, then neither has anyone else that right, and he deserves the same protection from both sources of danger.

Unfortunately, however, it is coming to be said by parties who claim to sorrow for the toiler that if the employer resorts to abuse it is an outrage, as it is by unanimous consent, but that if a man is blacklisted, starved and pushed around in the name of progress and labor organization his civil liberties are unimportant against the desires of so many. The desires of the many may be more accurately described in some cases as the personal ambitions of a few, but in any event the sole, individual workman's civil liberty has not yet been written out of the Constitution, and is not to be legislated out of existence by anyone's claim that a state or lawlessness constitutes war.

* * * *

I MAY BE a little ahead of my time in proposing that the Government, when it gets through protecting the individual from the abuse and exactions, espionage and coercive pressure of the boss, then should turn its attention to similar safeguards against the unions. That time must come, however, because otherwise the labor organizations will become a free-lance dictatorship operated within the Government and under its protection, but without the responsibility of government. The enormous treasury which labor organizations will amass will become a great political force whose effect might wipe out the liberty of those from whom it was exacted through a private taxing authority.

But my topic is the utter cynicism of men who protest their respect for human rights and for the law as it effects their opponents in thought and action, but waive all this when consistency would be inconvenient. This is of the Soviets and Hitler and the Duce, whose morals and honesty are indistinguishable and whose methods and temperament are so much alike that they would save lives and trouble by getting together. But we have been viewing the affairs of the crazy countries so long and reading so much of their brutal thought that a slight infection has set in in our own country. And it is worst in, of all people, an element who profess to be liberal or progressive, and, anyway, human, but count a toiler as no toiler but some very low sort of vermin and beyond protection of the laws merely because he will not do as they think best for him.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

The Silent Treatment.

"San Diego, Calif.—Mr. and Mrs. C. DeWeerth, celebrating 65 years of marriage, say they are still happy. They attribute it to the fact they never get angry at the same time. 'When she gets angry I keep still and when I get angry she keeps still. It all blows over in no time,' explained Mr. DeWeerth."—News item.

Elmer Twitchell says that if it works out it must be due to the climate out there in San Diego or something. "Nothing makes my wife madder than when she gets mad and I keep still," declared Elmer today.

* * * *

"A man don't mind it if he blows up and the old girl just keeps still and says nuthin,' but if there is anything a woman won't stand for it's having her anger ignored. Only the other day I got proof of that.

* * * *

"I'd been to the races after a promise to lay off and save money, and I'd forgot to take my badge off my vest. Well, the wife lit into me like nobody's business. The reason I kept still was that I couldn't think of anything to say, but she thought I was deliberately trying to avoid an argument.

* * * *

"If I had yelled right back at her the row would have been just a normal pop-off, but when I just sat there and said nuthin,' I was inviting the battle of the month. 'You never had a horse finish better than fifth in your life, yet you go out there and throw away money that I need to run the house,' she squawked. Well, she made a complete statement of truth and I couldn't deny it, so I just made no denial.

* * * *

" 'So!' she bellows, her wrath getting into high, 'you're gonna pull that old silent sufferer stuff, eh!'

* * * *

"It had been a tough day at the races and I guess my mind was exhausted or something, because I just couldn't think of a word to say, and I make the second big error. I picked up a newspaper. Boy, that touched her off! 'The old contempt angle, eh!' she says. 'You can't be bothered answering my arguments, I suppose. You can run around a race course all afternoon talking to everybody and dishing out both questions and answers, but when your wife asks you something you don't care to answer.'

* * * *

"Well, I couldn't recall the old girl asking me anything, and I just sat there trying to recall whether she had or not and I rattled the paper. That was another error. At the first rattle she caved a platter right through the front page, taking out the entire fifth and sixth race summaries and crashing me smack on the chest! The blow took by breath away. I wanted to say something because I knew that if I would only argue back the trouble would be over after an hour or so, but I couldn't get my wind. I sat there, unable to say a word, but I tried to gesticulate.

* * * *

"That's all I remember! It seems she had a sister who married a pantomimist and he was no good. The doctor says I'll be out in another week."

Paris Fair Reflects Europe Today

Troubles, Triumphs Synthesized In Exhibition.

By Europax.

Special Correspondence of The Post.

Paris.

TRIUMPHANT at last over a long series of difficulties and delays—including several sit-down strikes and other social disturbances which are still causing Premier Leon Blum's government very grave concern—the Paris Exposition has finally opened its doors.

Like some strange gigantic dragonfly poised in bright pastel splendor on the tree-lined banks of the River Seine, France's 1937 exhibition is gradually and laboriously emerging from its unsightly chrysalis of scaffolding and taking shape as a brilliant synthesis of the world's achievements in art, industry and science—as well as of its troubles in politics and economics.

Even incomplete, the exposition presents an intriguing spectacle. The French undoubtedly have a happy knack for this sort of thing. Making the most of a restricted site almost in the heart of the city, they have composed an extremely effective ensemble of form, color, light, water and sound.

Germany And Russia Dominate Exposition.

AS IF to symbolize Europe itself today, the Paris fair is dominated by Germany and Soviet Russia, whose towering pavilions face each other squarely in dynamic counterpoint on the right bank of the river opposite the Eiffel Tower.

Perched high up on a soaring facade of solid columns, the Nazi eagle glares rapaciously across at the equally lofty and even more monumental statue of a man and woman branishing the hammer and sickle that crowns the Communist pavilion. Both these exhibition halls are tremendous affairs, completely dwarfing the other international pavilions clustered around them in the Trocadero gardens and along the quays.

Only the cubistic bulk of Italy's big pavilion a little farther along on the other side of the Seine appears able to support comparison with the German and Russian exhibits. These three totalitarian halls, of all the 46 national pavilions and the 250-odd buildings of various kinds, were finished first, as if to flaunt their dictatorial efficiency in the face of France and the other democratic countries. Britain's rather conservative effort just across the river from the Soviet pavilion is still uncompleted while America, off to a late start, is not even nearing the finish line. Belgium alone of the larger democratic participants was ready on the opening day.

Labor's Obstruction Typical Of Democracies.

BEHIND this fact lies a significant story, a tale that sums up fairly well the whole situation in France—and to a lesser extent in Europe—today.

There is nothing unusual, of course, about expositions failing to be finished on time. But the Paris fair is late for other reasons than the usual absence of efficient organization. It opened almost a month late and is still far from finished because it has been for the past five or six months a political issue and a social experiment.

Briefly summarized, the question at stake in the Paris Exposition of 1937 is whether France's Socialo-Communist labor federation, the CGT, will be able to impose a "closed shop" on a national scale on French industry and virtually dictate workings hours and conditions.

Posted prominently in many places where work was proceeding on the exposition, I have seen notices stating that "the comrades who want to apply for work must first obtain membership cards from the CGT" (Confederation Generale de Travail, or French Federation of Labor). I have heard frequent first-hand accounts, from both workers and proprietors, which confirm the implication of these posters that the CGT has been seeking to obtain a monopoly on employment, at least in so far as the exposition was concerned.

Furthermore, organized labor has made a point of prolonging work on the exposition buildings, not only by refusing to exceed the 40-hour week despite governmental pleas and promises of extra pay, but by wholesale stalling on the job.

A couple of examples will suffice to illustrate the extent of this practice. A worker on the British pavilion, who was watched during a full working day of eight hours, put in six three-inch bolts—a job which normally should take about half an hour.

Belgian Workmen Raise U. S. Pavilion.

PROFITING by its late start, the United States saw what difficulties other countries were having with French labor, and virtually refused to go on with the American pavilion unless some special arrangements were made. The government gave in and allowed Belgian workmen to be used, in part at least. A comparison made by the exposition authorities revealed that, while the French workmen building the British pavilion put up only 15 tons of steel framework in one day, the same number of Belgian workers on the American pavilion were putting up 150 tons!

There have been numerous other incidents, including sit-down strikes staged because some contractor, unable to obtain union men to complete an urgent job, called on half a dozen non-union workers. The flying of red flags from certain exposition buildings was another indication of the way in which the exposition has been used for political purposes.

If Italy, Germany and Russia finished their pavilions first, it is not only because of their superior organization at the top, but because they were careful to make their participation in the exposition conditional upon their being able to employ their own nationals as workmen. Thus the German pavilion was built almost entirely by Germans and the Italian exhibit by Italians.

The Soviets likewise imported a number of workers from Russia; more especially, however, they benefited by the different spirit in which the French laborers approached their work for the Russian "comrades." The Belgian pavilion was constructed by Belgian workers who not only worked much faster than their French colleagues but were delighted to work overtime if the opportunity presented itself.

Popular Front Program Has Reduced Productivity.

THIS CONTRAST emphasizes the principal difficulty which France encounters today. The introduction of the 40-hour week and other perfectly normal social reforms such as paid vacations, has cut French industrial production far below normal. On all sides one hears the same complaint; it is not merely the shorter hours that impedes production, but the non-cooperative attitude of a great many of the workers, particularly the trade union delegates, which has disorganized the whole of France's industrial life.

So much for internal troubles. Internationally also the exposition is meeting with difficulties characteristic of Europe's economic anarchy. Many of the nations which have official pavilions at the fair do not allow their citizens to visit it, or forbid them to take the necessary currency out of the country. Italy, Germany, Greece, Portugal and Brazil all put restrictions on the export of currency.

In the case of Germany, where it has become a crime punishable by death to take out more money than is allowed by law—a few marks per month—France finally negotiated a touristic agreement which in theory will allow 50,000 Germans to come to the exposition provided they do not bring with them more than a few hundred francs. Remembering what has just happened to the 500 Rotarians who thought they would be permitted to attend the recent international Congress at Nice, however, one may be pardoned for being a bit sceptical. These Rotarians failed to show up, all but a few of them having been refused permission to take out the necessary funds—even when Rotary officials tried to arrange for them to come on a German boat and live on board ship in the harbor at Nice!

American Pavilion Rushed To Open July 4.

Triumphs Also Noted In Fair Arrangement.

BUT IF the Paris Exposition has its troubles, it also has its triumphs and achievements. There are several aspects of the French World's Fair of 1937 that merit special recognition.

Perhaps the most spectacular item is the network of "passerelles," or elevated passageways. These footbridges circulate everywhere, from one end of the fair to the other, spiralling up at one point, darting over a busy street, plunging into the midst of the rows of chestnut trees, emerging in a graceful glide down into another part of the exposition. Or again, they whirl up over a traffic circle, converge into a double-decker bridge and soar across the river to the opposite bank of the Seine. It is this original system of "passerelles" that make it possible for Paris to hold the exposition in the heart of the capital without completely interrupting all the city's traffic.

Another particularly successful feature of the fair is its entrances—32 of them, all different and all carefully worked out to make the most of the perspectives of the avenues that approach it. Some of these portals are veritable masterpieces. The luminous pylons on the Place de la Concorde are extremely effective, and so are the two tall columns stretching skyward at the Place de l'Alma.

The permanent buildings which the exposition will leave behind it are also unusually good. One of them, the new Trocadero, forms the monumental entrance to the fair. Where the old Trocadero Theater stood, a painfully rococo affair of the worst Victorian vintage, is now an open esplanade some 70 yards in width, flanked by two massive towers that frame the Eiffel Tower in the distance. The theater has been whisked underground and now faces riverward onto a wide terrace with fountains flowing down almost to the river.

The Eiffel Tower itself, greatly improved by being stripped of some of its florid trappings, is the apex of the exposition. The slender, lance-like thrust of the lacy steel shaft is turned, at night, into a vertical beam of light and color. It will be the center of frequent nocturnal fetes mirrored in the waters of the Seine.

Colonies And Regions Featured In Exhibitions.

TWO FRENCH contributions to the exposition are exceptionally well done, the French Colonial Center and the Regional Center. The Colonial Center is appropriately placed on a long island in the middle of the Seine. Here, in picturesque profusion, one finds the exotic appeal of Moorish Soukhs or Berber bazaars; the Oriental intensity of Indo-Chinese pagodas and the primitive beauty of pointed native huts; the easy charm of the tropical Antilles, and all the unending originality of Tunisian Arabs, Nigerian natives and Madagascans—in fact, the quintessence of France's great overseas empire.

The Regional Center constitutes a colorful synthesis of every corner of France—from alpine Savoy to flat-test Flanders, from azure Provence to silvery Biscay, from the sandy shores of Brittany to oak-beamed Alsace. All the kaleidoscopic variety and beauty of the French provinces has been reconstructed and harmoniously assembled.

Just at the edge of this Regional Center, on the banks of the Seine a short distance west of the Eiffel Tower, is the pavilion of the United States. When finished — and if France's labor unrest permits, it is hoped to inaugurate it on July 4—the exhibit will constitute an effective and appropriate evocation of America. Color, light and modern architectural form are blended into a harmonious whole. A lofty tower almost 150 feet in height suggests, without quite imitating, a sky-scraper. Forty-eight stars gleam brfiliantly against a blue background on either side of this tower.

The main part of the pavilion rises in twin blocks five stories above the river, while the base of the building recalls by its decorative scheme the red and white stripes of the American flag.

More Rumors

By Barnet Nover

The Western Powers And Russia.

THE WINDS of rumor that have blown so strongly around Russia during recent days show no signs of abating. In every capital speculation is rife as to the effects of the recent purges in the Soviet Union, and particularly the execution of Marshal Tukhachevsky and seven of his colleagues, not only on Russia's internal situation, but on her international position as well. Almost everywhere the presumption is that Russia is diplomatically weaker than it was and may even become isolated.

Indeed, Augur (V. Poliakoff), who is sometimes credited with being a mouthpiece of the British Foreign Office, suggests in the New York Times that Great Britain and France may now abandon Russia as a prop of the status quo and seek to stabilize peace through a rapproachement with Nazi Germany.

This, it is said, is the true purpose behind the invitation issued to Baron von Neurath, the German foreign minister. And a similar significance is seen in the unprecedented visit made by Gen. Ludwig Beck, head of the German general staff, on Gen. Gamelin, who holds a similar rank in the French army.

* * * *

THE SITUATION in Europe being as unstable as it is, anything is of course possible. Great Britain may agree to give Hitler a free hand in Central and Eastern Europe; France may throw Russia overboard in return for a new Locarno treaty; the Berlin-Rome axis may melt under the heat of friendship applied by Downing Street to the German Foreign Office; Mussolini's four-power pact may be exhumed; Germany and Italy, alone or in combination, may decide that a peace policy is at the moment likely to produce greater dividends than a policy of war threats.

But for every quid there must be a quo. The program of international blackmail pursued by Germany and Italy will not, one can be sure, be abandoned without payment of a stiff price. But whether the democratic powers are sufficiently alarmed by the Russian crisis and its possible bearing on their own fortunes to pay that price remains to be seen.

* * * *

THERE IS NO doubt much substance in the rumor that Great Britain is courting Germany. But to suggest that this a direct product of British disgust with the Soviet Union and the feeling that Russia is about to collapse is to display a real ignorance of British policy.

Actually Great Britain has been seeking for years to establish a modus vivendi with the Third Reich. Similarly Germany has courted Great Britain. But the basis of a real rapprochement has never existed because the British have never been prepared, in return for a German pledge of peace in Western Europe, to vouchsafe Hitler a free hand in Eastern and Central Europe and put pressure on France to throw overboard its alliance with Russia.

Is Great Britain now prepared to do this to win over Germany? For a long time a section of the Tory party has urged precisely such a course. But it is difficult to believe Downing Street is prepared to permit a succession of Spanish crises on the continent in return for German peace pledges of dubious validity.

And if that is true of Great Britain it is far more true of France.

THE BLUM government has never hidden its desire to effect a real rapprochement with Berlin. The spirit of Briand is not dead in the French Left, even though his life work has been smashed to bits by Hitler, Mussolini and the Japanese militarists.

But the French are realistic. They are quite aware that France's security can never be achieved in isolation; that it must, somehow, be part of a continental security system. In that system, Russia, whether weak or strong, whether governed despotically or with moderation, whether under its present leadership or some other, must be included. They may not like the developments that have been taking place in the Soviet Union. But, then, a great many Frenchmen also did not like much of what went on in Czarist Russia, and yet at no time after its formation was the Franco-Russian alliance ever in danger of overthrow.

In diplomacy moral considerations play little part. If Russia is capable of throwing any kind of weight in the diplomatic and military scale the advantage to France of the Russia tie will remain. It is a cold-blooded proposition, as cold-blooded as Britain's readiness to make friends with a regime responsible for the purge of June 30, 1934, the Guernica horror and the bombardment of Almeria.

If, on the other hand, the Russian Colossus really has feet of clay, then, obviously, that fact is as well known in Berlin as it is in Paris. Hence the price which France would be asked to pay for German friendship would necessarily be greater than before that circumstance was revealed. In the past, the Third Reich made the abandonment of the Franco-Russia alliance the sine qua non of a western pact. What the present price would be is, of course problematical, but it is certain to be considerable and probably beyond the readiness of France to pay.

* * * *

IT IS A FACT, of course, that the Russian crisis has exploded at a moment when the French are beset by very grave financial difficulties. This may lead the Fascist powers to consider the present a golden opportunity to consolidate their position. Their recent return to the nonintervention committee and the naval control, far from constituting a sign of peace-mindedness on their part, may simply be another maneuver to throw dust into the eyes of the democracies and drive a wedge between Russia and France. It is significant that Mussolini himself is now making no bones about Italian interventionist activities and is promising revenge for Brihuega. But Rome and Berlin—and, for that matter, London—may be exaggerating both France's weakness and Russia's alleged instability.

In any event it is much too early to conclude that any fundamental and far-reaching changes impend in Europe's diplomatic map, whatever the present maneuvers of Europe's statesmen and chancellories.

Purge Spreads To Remote Ends Of Soviet Union

Lumber, Auto and Railway 'Wreckers' and Bread Speculators Held.

By the Associated Press.

Moscow, June 18.—Russia's drive against enemies within was expanded tonight to include those charged with speculation in bread, tampering with the Soviet lumber industry, delaying automobile production and wrecking locomotives.

There was no indication of any lessening of the hunt for those accused of adhering to Leon Trotsky, exiled revolutionary leader, or of sabotage and conspiracy plots to overthrow the Soviet Union.

Already more than 100 persons have been executed by firing squads. Many thousands are believed to be in jails and labor camps. Denunciations of "wreckers, spies and diversionists" continued to pour into Moscow from Arctic Archangel, the Black and Red Deserts of Middle Asia and the Taiga or swampy forest lands of the Soviet Far East.

The latest indications of executions came from Middle Asia, where seven persons were condemned on charges of wrecking locomotives in the shops of the Middle Asian Railway, which connects with the famous Turksib (Turkestan-Siberian) Railway, built in 1930, under the direction of "Bill" Shatoff, Russian-born Anarchist and one-time member of American labor movements. Shatoff himself is reported in difficulties.

Held as "People's Enemies."

Information here did not make clear whether the condemnation entailed prison sentences or the firing squad for persons convicted of these charges.

From Archangel came reports two persons "and others" were prosecuted as "enemies of the people." This charge customarily means the firing squad.

Khabarovsk in the Far East reported arrest of a man, Gerbek, former director of the Far Eastern Timber Trust, on charges of spying and being a counter-revolutionary.

He is alleged to have prevented delivery of timber to the Red Army and to have agitated against the regime among the people.

Another man, Vasilieff, was denounced along with numerous aides for failing to provide 5,000 immigrant families at Khabarovsk with living quarters.

Eight persons were arrested at Rostov for purchasing large quantities of bread. They were charged with speculation, arousing the belief among foreign observers here that there is a bread shortage in that vital industrial center.

I. W. W. Man Denounced.

Elsewhere, the arrest or condemnation of dozens of important officials was reported in today's officially-controlled press.

Five officials and others of the labor committee of the local Stalin automobile plant were denounced as Trotskyist spies. A wrecker at Avtshenko reportedly headed the planning department of another big auto factory. A gang of saboteurs was said to have been discovered among the administrative and labor departments of the Omsk Railway.

Conditions within the Soviet automobile industry came in for further newspaper criticism. S. Dybetz, formerly with Industrial Workers of the World in the United States, was denounced anew for shortcomings in the industry.

Dybetz has 10 days to reorganize the automobile production of which he is administrator—a mammoth task.

The great Gorky plant, largest in Russia, presumably is typical of the falling behind in production—it already is 6,000 trucks and 3,000 passenger cars behind production schedules for the year.

Japanese Troops Kill 90 Manchukuo Bandits

Tokyo, June 18 (AP).—The Domei (Japanese) news agency reported today Japanese troops had attacked 200 Chinese bandits near Harbin, Manchukuo, killing 90 and seizing many rifles in an eight-hour battle.

2 League Members Quit.

Geneva, June 18 (AP).—Two prominent members of the financial committee of the League of Nations resigned today. They are Sir Henry Strakosch and Sir Otto Niemeyer, both British. Sir Otto said the three-year period of office was too short to permit useful service. Sir Henry said the South African government did not wish him to represent it.

U.S. Economists Predict Minor Business Slump

By the Associated Press.

Government economists predicted yesterday there will be a minor slump in industrial activity during the next few months.

They added, however, that the longer range outlook is relatively favorable.

In a report issued by the Bureau of Agricultural Economics the economists said several factors "point to a greater than seasonal recession in industrial activity before the summer is over."

Sales of goods by a number of important industries, particularly textiles, have been well below current output recently, it was reported.

New Buying "Unlikely."

When back orders of these industries are filled, the economists said, "production will be decreased unless there is a new wave of buying."

This wave was termed unlikely because "buying seems to be returning more to a current needs basis."

Other factors indicating a slowing down of the general business pace were said to include the "unsettling influences" of strikes, the small volume of new capital financing, and relatively little building activity.

The latter, the economists said, was "apparently a result of the sharp increase in construction costs."

Railroads Improving.

Despite these "tangible evidences pointing to a moderate decline in business activity before winter," the report said, "the general impetus of recovery should carry industry through any temporary period of hesitation."

Railroads were said to be excellent prospective customers of heavy industries this year and for several years to come because of increased traffic volume, gradual deterioration of equipment, and increased earnings.

"Many other lines of business are in a similar position," the survey said.

N. Y. Summer Register Omits Wallis' Listing

New York, June 18 (AP).—"Simpson, Mrs. Warfield (Spencer—Wallis Warfield), 16 Cumberland Terrace, London" has been dropped from the summer social register, the New York World-Telegram said today, and does not reappear as the Duchess of Windsor.

The summer register, intended primarily to record the summer residences of society, was being distributed today, the Social Register Association's offices said. Mrs. Warfield had been listed for many years.

Job Balancing Plan Aim of Labor Board

Geneva, June 18 (AP).—The International Labor Conference today voted two recommendations based on "advance planning of public works as a useful method of preventing unemployment and counteracting economic fluctuations."

Governments were urged to supply information on public works to a committee to be set up by the International Labor Organization, and to make uniform the timing and financing of public works projects and increase volume during depressions.

Dope Peddler Executed.

Peiping, June 18 (AP).—Ying Yu-shan, 39-year-old Chinese narcotics peddler, was paraded manacled through the streets today and executed at the Temple of Heaven killing grounds.

Life Of Keats

By William Lyon Phelps

'Aged 26.'

This is the title of an exceedingly interesting play concerning the life of the poet John Keats, written by Anne Crawford Flexner (Mrs. Abraham Flexner) and published by the Oxford University Press, New York. I am very glad that this play has been published, because it deserves to be, and I am particularly glad for my own sake, because I was absent in the South during the six weeks that it was on the New York stage last winter.

* * * *

In the theater, the title role was played by young Robert Harris, who came over from England for the purpose. He looked and acted the part, so all agreed, with great effect. Other persons in the play were men and women of Keats' time: Lord Byron, Shelley, Joseph Severn, Lockhard and Gifford, Charles Armitage Brown and Taylor, Fanny Brawne and her mother, and a few minor characters.

This is an extremely good play and intensely interesting reading. It is surprising how dramatically exciting Mrs. Flexner has made the scenes between Keats and contemporary poets, and between him and his brutal critics.

Furthermore, when this play was written in 1936, the "Letters of Fanny Brawne" had not appeared in print; they were published for the first time this spring. Yet Mrs. Flexner had the insight to understand Fanny's character and to show that she was deeply in love with the poet, which was irrefutably proved by the "Letters."

I advise all who are interested in English poetry to read this play, and I think it will impel them to reread the Poems and Letters of Keats, the Letters of Fanny Brawne and the literary history of that time.

The medical advice, that today would probably have saved the life of the poet, sent him to his death. Keats had the worst possible luck with his health, with his finances, and in the separation from Fanny Brawne.

Blum Creates Impression by His Frankness

outbreak of civil war which burst forth there six weeks after the Blum government was formed.

Defiant Germany; aggressive Italy; chaotic Spain—those were three of the five neighbors with which the Blum government was called upon to work out a modus vivendi. And relations with the other two were by no means satisfactory.

Belgium, under the leadership of young King Leopold and Premier Van Zeeland, was preparing to reassert its pre-war neutrality, thereby in the eyes of some exposing France to another flank attack from Germany.

British opinion, though officially friendly to France, was actually bitterly hostile because of Laval's refusal to take a strong line against Italy during the Ethiopian war. That premier, by trying to make no enemies, had successfully alienated Great Britain and Italy in almost equal measure.

ONLY POWERFUL FRIEND WAS SOVIET.

That, in summary, was the desperate diplomatic situation confronted by the Blum government just a year ago. Its only powerful friend in Europe was Soviet Russia, and on this friendship of convenience a large proportion of the French people looked askance.

In the short space of a year, by the exercise of skill and patience which history will place in the highest annuals of French diplomacy, all this has been changed. France has produced many great statesmen. She has never had a team whose conduct of international relations has been more brilliant than that of soft-spoken, idealistic Leon Blum and his business-like, clear-headed foreign minister, Yvon Delbos.

The major achievement of the Blum diplomacy, undoubtedly, has been the development of a very real Franco-British solidarity. The significance of this present fact is not minimized by the modest way in which both Mr. Blum and Mr. Delbos refuse credit for it.

Alliance of the two democracies came almost automatically into being when Hitler denounced the Locarno pact and sent his troops into the Rhineland. But Blum and Delbos have breathed real life into a paper agreement and made the present entente cordiale with Great Britain all that the phrase implies.

In a year the English attitude toward France has changed from suspicion and resentment to real esteem and friendship.

Second only to this is the reestablishment of the closest relations with Belgium, symbolized by the complete ease and lack of any obstruction with which travelers may now traverse the Franco-Belgian frontier. Much as one may take the new train ferry from London, wake up in Paris and be through the customs in three minutes, so one may pass from France to Belgium, or vice versa, almost without realization that a frontier exists. The train does not stop and the passenger need only assure a polite inspector that he has nothing dutiable to declare, which seems to satisfy in virtually every case.

SEE MOVE AS WAY TO BETTER RELATIONS

Far from showing annoyance at the Belgian desire to be free from military alliance with Great Britain and France, both of the latter governments view this development as offering a bridge towards better relations with Germany. The strength of Franco-Belgian ties is indicated by the fact that Premier Van Zeeland came here for final consultations, with Premier Blum and Foreign Minister Delbos, on the eve of sailing for the United States on a mission the importance of which I outlined in a previous article.

Though it may sound paradoxical, at first glance, the skill with which the Blum-Delbos team has handled the critical Spanish situation was demonstrated by the tragic Deutschland and Almeria incidents.

The seemingly unprovoked bombing of the German warship, and the subsequent childishly brutal bombardment of the Spanish port, could easily have led to war if the plan of the dominant European diplomacy were now not strongly set towards peace. Much less sensational events precipitated war in 1914.

But the Blum policy of isolating the Spanish holocaust, initiated on the outbreak of the civil war and prosecuted against his personal sympathies by the Socialist Premier ever since, is beginning to bear fruit. The speedy return of Germany and Italy to the non-intervention control is confidently expected here. And while the French government is only too well aware of the problems ahead in Spain, it none the less believes that the danger of a general European war arising from the Spanish crisis is now past.

OPTIMISTIC OVER PEACE IN EUROPE

Success breeds confidence, and both Premier Blum and Foreign Minister Delbos are now quietly and temperately optimistic about the stabilization of peace in Europe.

It is obvious that French diplomacy is not worried about the "Berlin-Rome axis," of which so much has been written, nor of the conclusion of any alliance of an aggressive or binding nature between the two dictatorships. The fundamental rivalries between Germany and Italy outweigh any co-operation arising from their virtual ostracism. The "axis" which the French do take seriously is that which connects their capital with London. On the maintenance of that the future of European peace is predicated.

None the less Paris, like London, is anxious to alleviate the tension latent in Germany's economic troubles, knowing that there can be no truly secure peace in Europe so long as the heart of the continent is continuously shaken by goose-stepping armies. The desire is to help Germany. The unsolved problem is how to help Germany under Hitler.

Perhaps the problem is not so insoluble, nor so far from solution, as appears superficially. A straw in the wind was the visit of Dr. Schacht to Paris two weeks ago, on the occasion of the opening of the beautiful and imposing German building at the exposition here. This building, incidentally, is said to be the most popular among French visitors to this great international fair.

ASKS THAT SIGNS OF GOODWILL BE SHOWN.

While in Paris Dr. Schacht also spoke at a dinner held under the auspices of the important Franco-German Committee, organized here in November, 1935, "to contribute to clarifying the atmosphere of Franco-German relations."

In this speech, called to my attention by the French Foreign Office, the German economic dictator urged the French press to play up the evidences of goodwill as well as the demands forthcoming from his government.

Germany, he said, will join in any guarantee of European peace calculated to forward disarmament. And she will rejoin the League of Nations if it can be regarded as "a consultative committee rather than a penal court."

The situation in Central Europe is still alarming and confused, but the Blum government today has no anxiety whatsoever regarding a direct Franco-German breach. Indeed, so far as its own very serious economic and financial problems permit, it is actively seeking to ameliorate the internal tensions which make Germany dangerous.

For their efforts in behalf of European political stability, both Premier Blum and Foreign Minister Delbos ask the sympathetic understanding of the United States. They do not ask America to involve itself in any of the possible causes of war on this troubled continent. They do regard it as essential that the United States should work helpfully, even though independently, to aid in establishing the necessary conditions for world peace.

FRIENDSHIP.

"Our friend, Lazarus, sleepeth." John 11:11.

True friendship is one of the greatest privileges. How fine it is to have friends: Friends who understand our motives when others misinterpret our actions; friends upon whom we can depend when all things go wrong, friends who believe in us even if the world should despise us. An outstanding friendship of the Old Testament is that of David and Jonathan. An illustration of friendship in the New Testament is that of the Apostle Paul and the beloved physician, Dr. Luke.

A friend is one with whom you can sit in silence without his thinking you are out of sorts. A great man was asked the secret of his beautiful life and he replied, "I have a friend." Jesus was noted for his friendships. So real were they that when his enemies wanted to disparage him, they called him "a friend of publicans and sinners." Again they said, "This man receiveth sinners, and eateth with them." They meant this as a taunt, but it was a glorious testimony. Jesus was a friend of Jairus and also the woman whom he healed by the way. He was a friend of the leper and of the demon-possessed man. He was friend of the little children and rebuked the disciples who sent them away, and not the mothers who brought them. Jesus said, "Our friend Lazarus sleepeth." He said to his disciples, "I call you not servants; but I have called you friends. "Some people are rich in their friendships. Others are equally poor. How wonderful that we can have not only the friendship of good people, but the friendship of Jesus, who said, "Ye are my friends, if ye do whatsoever I command you."

'Pick a Star' And Orchestra Divide Honors

"PICK A STAR." Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer release of a Hal Roach production, picturized from an original story by Richard Flournoy, Arthur Vernon Jones and Thomas J. Dugan, featuring Patsy Kelly, Jack Haley, Mischa Auer, Rosina Lawrence, Lyda Roberti, Charles Halton, Spencer Charters, Laurel and Hardy, James Finlayson, Walter Long, Wesley Barry, Johnny Hyams and Leila McIntyre. Directed by Edward Sedgwick. Reviewed Friday afternoon by Mary Harris at the Capitol Theater.

An important point neatly cracked home in "Pick a Star" is that the inimitable Laurel and Hardy are at their best in concentrated doses. For a few minutes, a bit less than the average short, are a complete panic, a rout, a massacre. They haven't been so funny since they snubbed the shorts for long features, and all the fun revolves just about a little cornet and harmonica playing. The moral seems to be that Oliver and Stan ought to help out Pete Smith in the important and onerous job of producing those entirely too scarce good shorts.

"Pick a Star" hardly rates any special brackets, but while seeing it you will hardly notice the absence of top-notch quality. For the picture has a swiftly running action broken by frequent ripples of fun. Essentially, it is one of those amiable do-funnies that Hollywood delights to supply to summer movie customers.

Kelly and Auer Lead.

Patsy Kelly and Mischa Auer lend whatever importance attaches to "Pick a Star," with the ingratiating Jack Haley also figuring nicely, although it would be pleasanter if he sang a bit more. Patsy, who is getting more than rotund about the midriff, plays the patsy sister who is dragged to Hollywood by her movie-struck sister, Rosina Lawrence. Mischa, one of the most finished actors in pictures, is the romantic movie star who nobly gives Rosina a real boost into the movie heavens after first luring her to his apartment to "see his antiques."

There are a few lines that must have bothered the Hays office a bit before they slipped past the censorship.

Rosina Lawrence, a comparatively newcomer in pictures, offers interesting if spotty work. After being unimpressive early in the picture, she winds up in a blaze of glory in a fancy musical number. You can take your choice as to whether Miss Lawrence or the cameraman suddenly got good.

Roberti Is Submerged.

Lyda Roberti does well in a midget of a part which hardly gives her a chance to be her normal firebrand self. Charles Halton, another good trouper, is handicapped by the role of a not very nice old movie magnate.

"Pick a Star" is trivial but pleasant, just another whirly celluloid about a small-town girl who makes good in pictures. For its best shot, we nominate the one where the export make-up artists go to work on the embryo star.

Shorts include a rowdy comedy, with Tom Patricola and Buster West, also a Honolulu visit in color, with the color slipping. The newsreel top is struck in the strike pictures, censored as they are.

Music Dominates Stage.

Ozzie Nelson who looks even younger than Phil Lampkin (It would be a good idea to get Phil and Ozzie together on this "youngest director" line) offers another of those smooth swing acts which dominate stage programs so unmercifully.

Shirley Lloyd who sings with the Nelson outfit on the air, is the only specialty performer. The audience seemed to like her no end. But after Shirley finished Ozzie steppd in and dmonstrated that he, too, is quite a singer, scoring especially well in "Boy in the Three Cornered Pants," one of the prettiest of recent hits.

Switching abruptly in mood, the Nelsonites climaxed their act with a group of Tschaikowsky selections, very beautifully done, especially the "March Militaire." And the audience appreciation was remarkable, suggesting that movie audiences should have more real music along with their regular dishes of swing.

Phil Lampkin and his lads also served up a bit of Tschaikowsky along with a string version of "Melancholy Baby" and some spirited mountain balladeering, the "Three-in-One" program as Phil calls it, providing bright musical moments, although we still think that Tachaikowsky was too generously treated in the matter of brasses.

Water, Park Budgets Cut in Hagerstown

Hagerstown, Md., June 18.—Mayor W. Lee Elgin and the City Council made another slash in the city's expenses yesterday by cutting $10,000 from the water department and $13,000 from the City Park budgets.

In order to keep the city out of the red, City Auditor George E. Slaybaugh informed the officials that other reductions will be necessary. Another meeting will be held in a few days for this purpose.

'Slim' Reveals New Source of Drama; Busse Orchestra Hit on Earle Stage

"SLIM." Warner Brothers picturization of the novel and screen play by William W. Haines, starring Pat O'Brien, with Henry Fonda, Margaret Lindsay, Stuart Erwin, J. Farrell MacDonald, Joseph Sawyer, John Litel and Dick Purcell. Directed by Ray Enright. Reviewed Friday afternoon at the Earle Theater.

Pursuing their quest of unusual topics for screen dramatization, the Warner Brothers have hit upon an exciting subject in the work of the field men who labor on electrical transmission towers and risk their lives in stringing the high tension wires.

BELL.

The action of the play is interesting and, for the most part, fast-moving, with occasional touches of tragedy to emphasize the hazards encountered in the work of the linemen. It is filmed for the greater part in the open and many picturesque "shots" of the steel riggings, far-flung landscapes and the ruggedness of the business are revealed. Some fine camera work is disclosed in these unique views.

Unlike most melodramatic film plays, "Slim" opens with views of the spillway at Boulder Dam, where so much of the Western country's electric power is generated. While these scenes are being shown the voice of an unseen speaker explains the importance of electricity to the present-day private and industrial needs of the world, much after the manner of a newsreel commentator.

Romance Is Introduced.

There is an oddly devised romance threading part of the movement of the picture, too. The principal figure in this ramification of the plot is Margaret Lindsay. She is "Red's" girl. "Red," played by Pat O'Brien, is the chief lineman on the job with which the film concerns itself. To the spot where he is working on the construction of a new tower comes a gawky country lad from whom the story derives its name. He is fascinated by the work and through "Red's" interest secures a job as his helper—"grunt" seems to be the technical name for helper in this particular line of activity. He and his boss become close pals. Then Slim meets the girl and falls in love with her just as "Red" had. It is a friendly rivalry and one that lends the story a distinctive twist that adds to its novelty.

The climax of the drama rates high in the element of suspense. To disclose the nature of its development would be to destroy its effectiveness for future audiences.

Played at High Tempo.

The piece is played with gusto by every member of the cast. Pat O'Brien, of course, always presents a spirited portrayal no matter in what role he is cast. He is a spirited fellow and could not be otherwise. Henry Fonda seems to me an ideal choice for the title role and plays with his usual naturalness and easy drawl. Miss Lindsay is an engaging heroine, vivacious and attractive, if not always tremendously dramatic. This is unimportant because the main interest of the story reposes in the work of the linemen and their thrilling outdoor adventures.

Another earnest and well-gauged performance is contributed by the veteran J. Farrell MacDonald, as foreman of the crew and the comedy vein is sustained with laziness and a stentorian singing voice by Stuart Erwin, a ground man, whose chief aim in life seemed to be to stage a one-man sit-down strike. The supporting players keep pace with the rest.

Busse Band a Hit.

Henry Busse and His Orchestra occupy the stage at the Earle this week and present a diversified program that was a hit with yesterday afternoon's crowd. The chief virtue of this act, it seems to me, is the diversification of entertainment it is able to offer. Busse himself is one of the foremost of the trumpeters and does his bit now and again, when not hopping about the stage swishing his baton in the faces of his men. He has instrumental groups in his band, too, which are competent and musicianly.

Among the specialists who scored most heavily yesterday were Northway and Danile ballroom dancers, who have one rather remarkable routine, and The Nonchalants, three acrobatic comedians who make every effort to kill each other and, I suspect, almost do. Their stunts are as lunatic as some of them are difficult.

Roy Bush, pianist, was forced to take an extra encore when he stepped to the microphone to sing and another member of the orchestra, whose name I did not catch, scored no less decisively in a series of vocal impersonations of singing celebrities. Then there is a robust tenor with a sense of comedy who also sings mightily, and on occasion the entire ensemble converts itself into a glee club. All very diverting.

The Paramount News and Freddie Clark's orchestral interludes round out a bill of which novelty seems to strike the keynote.

Trans-Lux

In compliment to the summer weather the new Trans-Lux program is composed almost exclusively of outdoor features, running the gamut of sports, clothes, open-air weddings, folk dancing and animal life—and catching on the fly the aftermath of the Duke of Windsor's wedding—the rise to fame of the Rev. Jardine.

Young Mr. Roosevelt and Miss duPont bravely faced the cameras, calmly accepting their roles as the present world-famous pair in love, while a set of triplets weds a set of twins with a stray third bridegroom thrown in for good measure.

The White House comes in for indirect spotlighting: Roberta Jonay, Mrs. Roosevelt's favorite dancer, makes her film debut with a few dance steps that will probably lead her to fame and fortune.

Of the news highlights these stand out: Senator McAdoo and wife take plane for Bermuda; Congressmen hold high jinks at the Alfalfa Club; Mrs. Johnson sails for Africa to cover Stanley's trail; Lotte Lehman entertains an Australian laughing bird; American British yachts take final tests for the big cup dash and the United States Bureau of Mines fights coal dust explosions.

Most serious educational shots on the Trans-Lux program are the ones showing the eclipse. Cameras caught the phenomenon in Peru, with descendants of the Inca Indians looking on, poker-faced and wonder-eyed.

"Feminine Flashes" is a good sports short.

Is Expert on the High Wires

In the Warner Brothers production of "Slim," currently on the screen at the Earle Theater, there is revealed a new source of exciting drama—the transmission of electricity over high tension lines to serve all of humanity. In this subject, the stellar role, that of "the best lineman on the job," is played by that genial Irishman, Pat O'Brien, whose smiling features are shown above.

In Hollywood

With JIMMY FIDDLER

Hollywood, June 18.—Idol chatter: Why is it that only actors with spindle legs can master Romeo-in-tights dialogue? Voice I could recognize blindfold: Kay Francis. Suggested title for a book to be written by Errol Flynn: "Taming Wild Women in Darkest Hollywood." Adolphe Menjou's sophistication has slipped to the point where he is now collecting stamps. Movie star who married his high-school sweetheart: Robert Young.

KAY FRANCIS

Peas from the same pod: Gracie Allen and one-time-star, Dorothy Gish. Wonder how Robert Taylor (whose parents wanted him to be a doctor) would look in a Van Dyke beard, wearing glasses on a long, black ribbon? Alice Faye's arms are as shapely as her legs. Hollywood Chamber of Commerce vows the local gold-diggers always say: "Orange you gonna gimme a fur coat?" Who was it told me that Claude Rains had an umbrella in his family crest? I wish every sit-down striker had used a new-style woman's hat for a pillow.

Impressionistic drawing of Lupe Velez and Johnny Weissmuller: Kansas tornado shakes hands with Atlantic hurricane. When a studio lifts an actor's option, it generally takes a load off his mind. Wonder if Fred Astaire realizes that he is forced to dance for his dinner? Will you ever forget Madge Evans, as a baby in those "Have you a little fairy in your home?" ads? Martha Raye and Joe E. Brown would be able to set some sort of kiss record.

I have always wondered where character actors get the true-to-life mannerisms which they exhibit on the screen. Riding in from the airport with Wallace Beery the other afternoon, I finally discovered one way. And it's a good one.

We stopped at a roadside stand for orange juice. The owner was a most unusual fellow, and I was watching him with mild interest, when Wally suddenly kicked me in the shins to get my attention. "Watch the way that guy scratches his head with his thumb," he said. I watched and it was fascinating. Instead of using a forefinger, the fellow stiffened his thumb and scratched away vigorously. When we left the drink-stand, Wally penciled a note about the queer habit. I will wager that some time in the future you will see that same mannerism on the screen.

Bob Burns button-holed me today to tell about Red Donahue's famous trained mule, Onu. The story concerned a scene they were making for a recent picture, and it seems that Red just naturally trains his mules too well. "That darned animal was supposed to balk," Bob drawled, "and he did balk.

But when we wanted him to move, he jest balked some more. One of the boys thought of that old remedy of lightin' a fire under the stubborn beast. But it was kinda chilly that morning and darned if Onu didn't jest kneel down to get warm!"

Watching a movie company shoot some scenes aboard a big sailing yacht, I saw one of the ropes in the standing rib break. An "extra" stepped forward immediately and told the director that there was spare rigging in the sail locker. "Behind the false bulwark in the bows," he added. Now I don't suppose many of the troupe realized the irony behind the "extra's" knowledeg of the yacht's design. The man's name was Jerry Storm and he was once one of Hollywood's highest-salaried directors. He used to own the boat!

Body of Infant Found Floating In River Here

The body of a male child was found in the Anacostia River near the Benning road bridge yesterday. Harbor police said the child was only a few weeks old.

Two men, who saw the body, phoned police and Policeman C. A. Parker, of the Harbor Precinct, removed the body to the morgue.

Murder Maniac Is Back Again To Chill Blood

'Night Must Fall' Plays Repeat Engagement at Columbia.

"NIGHT MUST FALL." Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picturization of the play by Emlyn Williams, adapted to the screen by John Van Druten, starring Robert Montgomery, supported by Rosalind Russell, Dame May Whitty, Merle Tottenham, Kathleen Harrison and Alan Marshal. Directed by Richard Thorpe. Reviewed, return engagement, by Dorothea Lewis.

Years ago (how many we're not quite sure) there was a picture entitled "The Big House" and in it there was a young coward and weakling, jailed for manslaughter, craven and terrified during a jail break. It was a performance we never forgot and the performer was Robert Montgomery.

Between "The Big House" and "Night Must Fall" there has been a great deal of Robert Montgomery, Playboy, on view but very little of Robert Montgomery, Actor. We've been growing increasingly impatient and irked about it because we knew he could act. We had seen him do it.

He is acting again this week, playing brilliantly in an assignment fraught with pitfalls. As you must know by now, he is called upon to impersonate Dannie, a strange young murderer, with great charm and great evil combining to make him doubly dangerous. It is a performance worth huzzas and consideration when the year's bests are topics of conversation. For sheer excellence we give you Dannie's little descriptive speech about the missing woman——" . . . her throat—rather thick . . . She laughs loudly and then—stops . . ." etc. After that you know why she is missing and just how dangerous Dannie is.

The picture, dominated by this pathological gentleman, who smiles his way into women's confidence and then kills them, isn't a pretty one or pleasant, but it is exciting, startling and fascinating in the perfection of its suspense. Rosalind Russell in a terrifically difficult role, Dame May Whitty and her amazing hysterics, and Merle Tottenham all add to the effectiveness of a very effective and most unusual picture.

Subsidiaries, including the newsreel and an Our Gang Comedy, complete a bill notable for a performance which we hope will mean that the new Montgomery is to be like the old—of some years back.

Park Ave. Party Halted by Police After Bottles Fly

By the Associated Press.

New York, June 18.—A nice little party in the luxurious Park avenue apartment of Col. Jeremiah Beall, 67-year-old retired manufacturer, broke up unexpectedly early today when one of the colonel's seven women guests socked another with a champagne bottle, vintage 1926, and got socked in turn with a ginger ale bottle.

The colonel also was socked, but not as hard as his guests.

Beall gave a party. The guests were seven women, bent upon a pleasant evening with music and song and enlivening conversation. The colonel had personally invited Miss Marion Anderson, 39, and she had picked the other six.

Everything went off splendidly until Miss Sylvia Julian, who is 26 and lives down on Staten Island, got the idea Miss Anderson had been given some money by the colonel. Miss Anderson denied she had.

Then, detectives say, the two began flying at each other. One blow led to another, and suddenly the colonel, who had left the room, reappeared.

Miss Julian later charged the colonel seized her arms and held her while Miss Anderson swung the champagne bottle, recently emptied, against her head. This angered Miss Julian. Miss Anderson later charged Miss Julian got one arm free and grabbed a ginger ale bottle and began flailing about. Miss Anderson stopped the bottle once, the colonel another time.

The other five women, meanwhile, slipped quietly away, and when the party broke up Miss Julian got the police and signed a felonious assault charge against the colonel and Miss Anderson, who countered with a charge of felonious assault against her.

An ambulance surgeon took stitches in the women's heads. Beall said he felt bad, but he didn't need stitches.

Later when the three appeared in felony court they withdrew the charges and told Magistrate Richard F. McKiniry they wished to drop the matter.

The Post's New Yorker

By LEONARD LYONS

New York, June 18.

PRINCE ROSPIGLIOSI: Your former wife, Marion Snowden, who has been honeymooning in Bermuda with Brad Dresser, became embarassed because Louis Reed, her second husband, also is in Bermuda. The Dressers therefore have reserved passage on the plane returning Saturday. Reed, also embarrassed, decided to clear out too. And he too has made reservations—on the same plane! . . .

* * * *

GEORGE VI: Rev. Jardine, who married your brother to Wallis Warfield, won't come to America until he first talks it over with the Duke and Duchess of Windsor. He won't accept any money for his lectures here . . . Libby Holman: So you never met Jack Doyle before?. You were with him at the Riviera opening—a year ago!

* * * *

DARRYL ZANUCK: The newspapers reported on Tuesday that Simone Simon had a "blind date" that night, and she refused to divulge the names of her escorts. They were Bill Leslie and Herbert Bayard Swope, jr. . . . At the Stork Club that night a stranger approached her and asked for a dance. When she refused him, he protested: "But there's an excellent reason why you should dance with me. I was on the same train with you coming East." . . . "Mebee suh," Miss Simon replied, "but so was the engineer!" . . . Sid Gary:—Emil Ludwig confided that he's simply crazy about double-talk. "I went to the Empire State Building," he told an intimate, "so I told the driver 'Double-trend to avoid the traffic, but very carefully, to Empire State.'"

J. EDJAR HOOVER: Tuesday night the officials working on the Parsons kidnaping case were tipped to the fact that a strange odor was emanating from a place near Smithtown. The police rushed there, on the possibility that it may be the decomposed body of the kidnap victim. Investigation showed that the odor really was remarkable—it was a goat farm!

A. S. P. C. A.: Here's one for your annual award. Paul Sydell and his trained dogs now are working at Surfside at Atlantic Beach. The management has erected an outdoor swimming pool for the dogs . . . Harry Hopkins: The Federal Theater actors working in the WPA Caravan Theater, which gives performances in the city's parks, are squawking. The open-air audiences have devised a new form of criticism. When they're displeased, they stoop to pick up rocks—and hurl them at the hapless actors! . . . Major Bowes: Dick Powell's leading lady in "Singing Marine" is named Doris Weston. One scene shows her getting the bell in an amateur contest. But she got her Warner contract after appearing on your program in July, 1935.

ADOLF HITLER: An American reporter was in Berlin last month. A Nazi dined with him the night before he returned to America. "There is no doubt," the Nazi enthused, "that 98 per cent of the German people are behind our beloved leader, Adolph Hitler!" . . . "Certainly," the reporter agreed, "but it's funny—wherever I went I always ran into the other 2 per cent!"

He didn't tell them that by "stateroom," he meant the new sleeper plane. M. C. A. won't permit any of its employes to fly—ever since young Tinsley was killed in that plane disaster two years ago . . . Josef Stalin: The Communist Party for the past 12 years has held all its rallies at Madison Square Garden, spending $50,000 for those rentals. Yesterday they asked to rent the Garden for November 7, for the twentieth anniversary celebration of the revolution. It's no go, though—because of a hockey game that night!

CURRENT EVENTS: Norman Cousins, literary editor of your magazine, entered the NBC spelling bee Saturday night and won a $5 prize. Before the consolation play-offs, his assistant coached him, and urged him to study the word "Caoutchouc," but Cousins refused to waste the time, and bet him $5 that the word wouldn't be drawn . . . Various words then were drawn from a hat, to each of which was appended a tag indicating the prize for that word. Cousins drew "Caoutchouc"—a $5 word—and so your Lit. Ed, not only misspelled it, but thereby lost the $5 prize money he originally had won.

GROVER WHALEN: The night before the Paris exposition opened, reporters were refused permission to see the German exhibits. They discovered the reason later—on the white walls had been painted "Heil and Hitler, rather than give employment to what he calls "French Communists," sent 30 Berliners to Paris, 20 of them disappeared immediately, so the rest were ordered returned.

Contract Bridge

By Mrs. Ely Culbertson.

When all other resources are exhausted a good player falls back on deception. He knows how often he himself guesses wrong and thinks of a way to encourage others to fall into error. Note how easy South made it for his opponents to blunder in the hand below.

	♠ A K 5 ♡ A J 7 ◇ A K 6 4 ♣ K 8 7
♠ 7 4 2 ♡ 10 9 ◇ Q J 9 8 7 ♣ A 10 2	West / East / North / South	♠ Q J 10 9 3 ♡ 8 6 5 3 2 ◇ — ♣ Q 5 4
	♠ 8 6 ♡ K Q 4 ◇ 10 5 3 2 ♣ J 9 6 3

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1 ◇	Pass	1 N T	Pass
3 N T	Pass	Pass	Pass

West opened the seven of spades. Declarer ducked the first trick but had to win the second with dummy's King. After taking the diamond Ace, South mournfully counted his tricks and discovered that there were available only two in spades, three in hearts and two in diamonds. It was impossible to produce an extra trick in the red suits, and spades were obviously hopeless. Two tricks, therefore, had to be obtained in clubs.

Concealing his dismay, declarer boldly led the King of clubs from dummy. West could tell from the bidding and from the dummy that South was unlikely to have many entries. The lead of the club King seemed like the first step in the establishment of a long suit, and West decided to hold up his Ace until the third round in order to embarrass South as much as possible. He therefore allowed the King of clubs to hold the trick.

South did not flicker an eyelash at this turn but merely continued the suit by leading a low club from dummy. East could not tell what was going on and naturally played low. South played the Jack, and West continued with his plan of holding up until the third round.

Having succeeded thus far, South could be sure of his contract and decided to find out what the opponents would say when they discovered the sad truth about the club suit. He therefore led another club, dropping the Ace and Queen in one fell swoop.

Declarer made four notrump, and grinned as East and West "discussed" the defense.

Vegetables Offer Chance To Vary Diet

Parchment Paper Used in Cooking Saves Flavors.

By Rebekah Blake.

JUNE may be the month of brides and roses but to practical-minded homemakers it is also the month when succulent new-edition vegetables tempt you to fill your market baskets to the brim, to supply your family with the health-giving vitamins. For vegetables are now at their best, as fresh as if you had gathered them from your own gardens instead of from the grocer's bin.

Take advantage of the new vegetables and buy them in quantities and serve them in quantities. If they are in good condition when purchased and are stored in your refrigerator, they will not spoil and you will save time and money by buying a week's supply at a time. Vary your menus by preparing an assortment of vegetables and fix these in different ways.

Vegetables never have had a fair break. Yet all they ask is to be cooked quickly to just the right tenderness in a small amount of water.

Cooking Suggestion.

For cooking vegetables use a saucepan with a tight-fitting cover, usually pouring in only enough water to cover the bottom of it. When you hear the water boiling, add the vegetables for you want them to cook tender as quickly as possible, thus keeping their original color. Add salt—about ½ teaspoon for each cup of water used — and a pinch of sugar added with the salt often makes a good flavor. When they are done, remove them from the fire and pour off the water. Don't let them simmer along and get too done and lose their color. Season them with plenty of salt, pepper and butter before they go to the table.

A word about cooking spinach. Cook it tightly covered in just the water that clings to it when it is lifted from its bath and watch the clock that it only cooks from three to five minutes, so it will be just done and not loose its color and flavor. If cooked properly, this vegetable will not be spurned by the members of your family, young or old.

Perhaps you dislike the strong flavor of cabbage, onions, Brussels sprouts and cauliflower. If so, cook the vegetables quickly until they are just tender, in an uncovered saucepan in a large amount of boiling water. If you like the full, rich flavor, cook them in a covered saucepan in just enough water to cover the bottom of the pan.

Parchment Paper Cooking.

Vegetables baked in a casserole in the oven are good, but have you ever tried the parchment paper method? Tie the prepared vegetable loosely in a sheet of parchment paper and cook it tender in a covered saucepan with enough boiling water to float the bag. If you want to cook two to three vegetables for the same meal, tie each in its own sheet of parchment and cook them all in the same pot.

Raw vegetables are especially good just now. Have you ever tried serving shredded spinach-in-the-green in a tossed salad bowl or as a "liner" for a vegetable salad plate? It is simple and as easy to do as is serving raw cauliflower flowerlets and curled carrot slivers on the relish tray. And try glamourizing a cucumber. Serve thinly sliced cucumbers with the skin left on your relish tray. If you prefer to take yours pared, run the tines of a fork along the length of the pared cucumber, before slicing; this imparts an attractive notched edge to the cucumber when it is sliced.

You can often add interest to vegetables, too, just by a new twist in cutting them. Try using the fruit baller for potatoes, large carrots and turnips. Or, use the lattice cutter on carrots, beets and potatoes and the children will eat them with a new zest. Fresh chopped mint or parsley added to the melted butter you pour over vegetables gives them an added flip. The goodness of grated cheese added to cream sauce is something to remember. You may successfully scallop other vegetables than potatoes. They're delicious when embedded in a rich creamy sauce and topped with a sprinkling of toasted crumbs. French vegetables make a grand change, too.

Turnip Harlequin.

3 cups diced cooked turnips
2½ cups cooked, drained peas
4 tablespoons diced, canned pimiento
¼ cup top milk
¼ teaspoon salt
⅛ teaspoon pepper
2 tablespoons butter or margarine

Casserole of Cabbage, Tomatoes and Rice.

3½ cups tomatoes
2 teaspoons salt
1 teaspoon granulated sugar
1 tablespoon minced onion
2 cups cooked white rice
½ cup soft bread crumbs
2 tablespoons grated American cheese

Cook the cabbage until tender; drain. Meanwhile, cook the tomatoes, salt, sugar, onions and 1 tablespoon of butter for 5 minutes. Arrange the cabbage, tomatoes, and rice in alternate layers in a 1½ quart casserole. Combine the crumbs with the remaining tablespoon of butter and the cheese, and sprinkle over the top of the casserole. Bake in a moderate oven of 375 F. for 45 minutes. Serves six.

Scalloped Cauliflower.

1 medium head cauliflower
2 cups bottled milk or 1 can evaporated milk and 1 cup water
1 egg beaten
1 cup soft bread crumbs
1½ teaspoons salt
⅛ teaspoon pepper

Remove the outer stalks from the cauliflower; then break it into flowerets. Cook until tender; drain and arange in a 1½-quart casserole. Combine the remaining ingredients and pour over the cauliflower. Bake in a moderate oven of 375 F. for 40 minutes. Serves six.

Vegetables Prevent Meal Monotony

Summer vegetables are full of color, flavor and vitamins. To save market money and time buy these in quantities, but be sure they are in good condition, and store them in a cool place. Some of these greens, as cauliflower, spinach and carrots, are equally good when served hot or cold.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

Confessing 'No Mutuality in Relationship' After Four Years' Marriage, Wife Asks Advice.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I have been married exactly four years and thus far there has been no mutuality in our relationship. When we had been married a few months I confided the truth to my husband, not knowing any better. He was hurt . . . I soon saw if I continued to let him know I am what is termed "cold" that I would lose both his love and him. So I became an actress, convincingly playing the part of a completely adjusted wife. . . . I do not know how much longer I can go on this way and keep my reason. . . .

* * * *

Have I been wrong in praticing this deception all these years? Or do you think the end justifies the means? If there is any better remedy, any solution, any doctor would advise me, I shall appreciate your telling me. The existent relationship is becoming repugnant. Concealing that repugnance and pretending complete responsiveness is such a strain on my nervous system that I think I shall go mad . . . I am starving for daily affection and tenderness of a comradely sort. I can not confide in my husband. He would hate me from the bottom of his heart, and I do not wish to incur the hatred of the man I love. . . . Yet I believe our failure to adjust is more his fault than mine. . . .

DEAR MRS. M. A.: This failure to adjust, so called, is probably the fault of both. Your husband's, for lacking understanding, patience and the knowledge of how to awaken responsiveness, and yours, for not having dealt forthrightly before now with the situation. Judging from your full testimony, however (so intimate that it cannot be published here), your husband is the more to blame.

* * * *

This is a problem for a doctor. Any good doctor knows all about the psychic, mental and organic factors which conspire to produce such a marital impasse, and he knows how best and most speedily to correct the maladjustment.

He would interview and re-educate both you and your husband. He would dispel any impulse toward hatred which your husband might temporarily feel at learning the pitiful truth of your long deception. If you care to send me a stamped, self-addressed envelope, I will give you the names of several physicians who are well qualified to help you. From that list you may make a choice. Or you may take your problem to Dr. Elmer Klein, psychiatrist with the Washington Life Adjustment Center, 1464 Columbia road northwest, telephone Adams 1033.

* * * *

The best that can be said for your deception is that you meant well. The end might have justified the means if you were indeed an emotionally frigid woman, well content with casual companionship. But your acute emotional distress indicates that you are capable of complete responsiveness if intelligently loved.

M. H.

A Spiritual Symbol.

DEAR MARY HAYWORTH: May I, a young matron, contribute an opinion in this discussion of trial marriage (or its equivalent)? Marriage is, of course, a compromise between nature and the laws of society. When we regard physical union as a symbol of spiritual unity, we are investing it with its proper place and meaning, it seems to me. Hence, how can it be appropriate before vows are taken?

* * * *

One of the finest friends I ever had, a 75-year-old Washington scientist, a life-long student of human nature who was almost a father to me, was wont to say: "If you want a man to marry you, lead him to the altar first. Few men can be fully depended upon to consummate marriage after they have already been granted physical consummation."

* * * *

In the light of his wise remark I have studied the lives of my closer friends over a period of years. In only one case is a couple still married and reasonably happy who disregarded the conventions before marriage. In all the other cases I happen to know either they never married or else they soon separated.

Tomorrow's Problem.

Problems of youth in love will be discussed here Sunday. One concerns a girl whose beau, after courting her assiduously for two years, now goes out with other girls occasionally, although still swearing he loves only her. She asks what to do. Another promblem is that of a high school girl engaged to marry a Marine, whom she hasn't seen for two years and who can't come back until 1938. She believes his love is waning.

Explain it as you will! Society's laws aside, those who reserve nothing in life as wholly sacred eventually miss a deep spiritual joy for which there is no counterpart.

DEAR LOIS: I believe, in the last analysis, that the idealists are the true realists; and that your idealistic interpretation of physical union as a symbol of spiritual oneness is incontrovertibly sound.

Light Perfume Found Best in Warm Weather

Cologne and Thin Extracts Applied on Body Most Helpful.

By Carolyn Abbott.

AMERICAN WOMEN, who have often been called the best-dressed women in the world, have also been criticized as the most inexpertly perfumed. To some extent this is a result of the American man's disregard for perfume. However, the over-perfumed woman is perhaps responsible for many men's reaction against scent.

Two types of remarks aimed at the wearer of perfume may reveal to her whether her fragrance is suitable or not. "That is a grand perfume you are wearing," is addressed to the perfume rather than to the person using it. But "How do you manage to keep so exquisitely perfumed?" is a true compliment and implies that you use good taste in the choice of your scent and artistry in its application.

The two branches of the art of using perfume are: the proper selection of a fragrance and its proper application. Both of these should be studied for good grooming.

Hot Weather Hints.

In choosing your perfume you must make sure that your personality is not subordinated to some striking odor that does not suit you. A perfume should complete you, illustrate and flatter you and leave a vague but poignant memory of you. And for the summer season it should be some light, airy fragrance that will suggest romance or gayety. Toilet waters and eau de colognes for the summer are preferred in light floral odors.

There is no more cooling lifesaver when hot weather strikes you than eau de cologne. It is sprayed over your body. Besides lending a delightful fragrance to your entire person, and being more inexpensive than perfume, cologne tends to freshen you. The classic uses for cologne are on the wrists and headachey foreheads, but it is also restful to rub it on hot, perspiring feet. Or use it on the neck and shoulders after bathing.

How to Apply Perfume.

In using perfume, it is generally preferable to use it on your skin. Most perfumes blend badly with most textile materials. Therefore, it is inadvisable to apply it to your outer garments. Woolens and tweeds in particular are dyed and contain fats which often mix badly with perfume. To dab perfume behind the ears is not a bad practice but is not highly recommended, for it concentrates the odor in one place and shares the general disadvantage of placing perfume on the skin not covered by clothes. Perfume is best placed on parts of the body covered by clothing because the fragrance seems to come from within and to be a part of the general ensemble and personality of the wearer.

In buying perfumes it is wiser to have several scents in small bottles than one large amount of one fragrance, for it is monotonous to stick to one perfume, and if you do it you are likely to use too much, unconsciously.

Use Fresh Supply.

Then, too, perfumes evaporate and it is better to have a fresh supply often than to keep a large quantity so long that it gradually changes its character.

For active sports, perfume should not be used but the use of cologne, lavender, pine or verbena water after the bath or in the bath water gives just the right hint of vague fragrance. Pine bath salts and oil are especially popular this season.

Perhaps the women of today could take a lesson from the ancient Greeks, who knew exactly what to do with perfume. Mint was recommended for the arms, palm oil for the jaws and breasts, eyebrows and hair were anointed with perfumed unguents, and the knees and neck were scented with the essence of ground ivory.

How to Be Popular

WHAT makes one girl so much more attractive to men than another, heart-broken Ellen wonders.

Jane is no prettier than Ellen. Yet Jane has the magnetic personality that enchants men. Ellen was proud of her charming sister's popularity—never minded her own lack of attraction for the opposite sex. Not until Jack, the only man she felt she could love, was captivated by Jane's magnetism.

Is Ellen doomed to loneliness? Must she miss the glow of romance in her life? Not if she learns to develop her hidden charms and season them with engaging little feminine wiles any girl can learn.

What are these wiles? The winsome unspoken flattery that makes any man adore. Listening with breathless eagerness while he talks. Showing with your happy smile and the light in your eye that you like being with him.

Spoken flattery, too, helps to bewitch a man. Not the ridiculous "Oh, you great big wonderful man" sort, but the genial approval that makes him feel like a great fellow. "What a good idea," you say. Or "I like the way you tell it;" "You couldn't have done better;" "I'm sure you'll succeed."

Our 40-page booklet, SUCCESS IN LOVE AND MARRIAGE, tells you how to steer your course in love. Develop the traits that make you irresistible to the opposite sex. Learn how to hold a man when he's won.

Send 15c for our booklet, SUCCESS IN LOVE AND MARRIAGE, to The Washington Post, Home Institute, 109 West 19th street, New York, N. Y. Write plainly your name, address and the name of booklet.

President, Department Aides Attend Dinner

Miss Josephine Roche, Assistant Secretary of the Treasury, kept the dinner that drew President Roosevelt and 26 departmental aides to the home of Sumner Welles last evening from being strictly a stag affair.

With Solicitor General Stanley F. Reed acting as host by reason of his seniority, members of the "Little Cabinet," composed in the main of assistant secretaries to Cabinet members, met at the Oxon Hill, Md., residence of the Undersecretary of State for an informal get-together at which the President was guest of honor.

In keeping with the informality of the event business suits were the favored attire with the men. Miss Roche wore a tailored black crepe and marquisette frock, which in her own words "is one of those jacket dresses you can wear almost anywhere."

Speech-Making Barred From Program

By way of having an official dinner that was different, speech-making was barred last evening. But the elaborate menu was quite up to the standard of fancier functions.

Nine of the ten Government departments were represented on the guest list. A number of eligible officials could not go because of prior engagements, and the War Department was not represented at all because its Assistant Secretaryship is vacant.

The President first planned to leave by motor after the dinner for Fort Washington, and to board the U. S. S. Potomac there for his usual week-end boat trip. Later, however, he canceled these arrangements because of the uncertain weather.

A few hours before the dinner he found time to receive at the White House Cornelius Vanderbilt, jr., who recently returned from Europe, where he traveled on the Continent in his aerocar, Stardust.

Justice Department In Full Force

But back to last evening's "Little Cabinet" dinner. Among the officials who attended were the following: Mr. Wilbur J. Carr, Mr. Francis B. Sayre, from the State Department; Mr. Wayne C. Taylor, Mr. Stephen B. Gibbons, and Miss Josephine Roche, from the Department of the Treasury; Mr. Stanley F. Reed, Mr. Joseph B. Keenan, Mr. Golden W. Bell, Mr. Brien McMahon, Mr. Robert H. Jackson, Mr. Carl McFarland and Mr. James W. Morris, Department of Justice.

Also, Mr. William W. Howes and Mr. Smith W. Purdum, from the Postoffice Department; Mr. Charles Edison, from the Navy Department; Mr. Charles West and Mr. Theodore A. Walters, from the Department of the Interior; Mr. M. L. Wilson and Mr. Harry Brown, Agriculture; Mr. Ernest D. Draper and Mr. J. M. Johnson, Commerce; Mr. Edward F. McGrady, Labor; and Mr. Stephen T. Early and Mr. Marvin H. McIntyre, Presidential secretaries.

Gingham Ball At Shoreham Gay With Beets

Gayly-colored dance frocks set off with corsages of carrots, radishes, beets and parsley helped to provide the barn frolic atmosphere for the Gingham Ball given last night at the Shoreham.

For a number of years this affair has been an event of the summer season, arranged by Mrs. Neitah King. The ball last night was attended by about 200 members of the younger set.

In keeping with the barn dance idea, the girls wore gingham evening gowns, while their escorts were attired in overalls and wide-brimmed straw hats. Guests danced from 10 o'clock until early this morning to Sidney's music, with intermissions for a "novel dance" contest, the singing of popular numbers by Miss Betty Ryder, and supper served at midnight.

Mrs. Harry H. Woodring, wife of the Secretary of War, headed the list of patronesses for the dance. Among those receiving with Mrs. King were Mrs. Frederick Richardson, of Fairfax, Va.; Mrs. James Johnson (the former Betty Angus), Mrs. Warren Cubberley, Mrs. Dwight Galt and Mrs. Howell Clagett. Miss Betty Galt was chairman of the dance and Miss Laura Johnson vice chairman. Mr. James Wimsatt was head of the floor committee.

In addition to the local younger set, a group of next winter's debutantes of Baltimore came over for the dance, some staying over with friends for the weekend. Several parties preceded the affair, and among those to entertain was Miss Peggy Dow, who gave a dinner in honor of Miss Pannin Tugwell, who has been visiting her for several day.

Among others seen during the evening were Miss Katherine Friant, Miss Gloria Grosvenor, Miss Fanchon Aldrick, Miss Margaret Sampson, Miss Betty Marsh and Miss Genevieve Marsh, who has just returned home from Sweet Briar; Miss Ann Graham, Miss Clarissa Mitchell, Miss Randolph Richardson, Miss Katherine Willing, Miss Patricia Brewer, Miss Eula Council, Miss Cornelia Holiday and Miss Betty Mattingly.

Mrs. Gilmour Wed To Rep. Sauthoff

Marriage Is Performed in Methodist Chapel.

A marriage of interest in Congressional circles took place yesterday morning at 10 o'clock in the chapel of the Methodist Building when Representative Harry Sauthoff, of Madison, Wis., and Mrs. Lenore Gilmour, of Port Huron, Mich., secretary to Representative Jesse P. DuPont Nuptials To Be All White

By the Associated Press.

Wilmington, Del., June 18.—It will be an all-white wedding when Ethel duPont and Franklin D. Roosevelt, jr., say "yes" on June 30. Lilies and peonies will be the only flowers in the simple decorations in the church and the duPont home.

The 14 windows of Little Christ Church at Greenville, near here, are to be banked with California woodwardia fern and filled in with peonies and lilies.

On the ends of alternate pews, in the center aisle, will be clusters of peonies and lilies bound with white satin ribbon. The side walls of the altar will be banked with cibodium ferns, palms, and filled in with peonies. Clusters of lilies will flank the chancel. The choir stall and the console will be decorated with palms and ferns.

At the reception at Owls Nest, the home of Miss duPont's parents, guests will be received in a bower of banked cibodium ferns. The bridal table, which will be set in the house, will accommodate 40 persons, including the bridal party. Seven silver centerpieces, placed on the table, will be filled with bouvardia, lilies of the valley and maidenhair fern.

Other guests, numbering about 1,000, will be served a buffet supper underneath a green and white striped canvas canopy on the grounds around the house. The canopy will be approximately 40 by 80 feet. The three center poles are to be concealed with evergreens, and will simulate growing trees.

An evergreen hedge filled in with flesh colored and white peonies will surround the area covered by the canopy. The line of this hedge will follow the undulatons or hollows between 50 supporting poles, after the fashion of a chain fence.

Indirect lighting will be achieved by concealing lamps behind a flower-covered valance along the border of the ceiling.

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes

New York, June 18.

ASSUMING a fetching spectator-sports outfit and a keen, outdoor look, I sat in at one of the summer's big sport events for ladies the other afternoon. It was nothing less than a championship badminton tournament, fought out, fang and claw, on the roof of a famed Fifth Avenue beauty factory.

ALICE HUGHES.

It's no easy game, this batting about of the little feathered doodad, and I was proud of the agility of the contestants as they engaged in the life-and-death struggle for fame and glory. The defending champion, Mrs. M. Burdette, of Greenwich, Conn., was all over the court. I was delighted to see three of my colleagues in the newspaper business bounding here and there, swishing and slashing. They were glorious Gloria Braggiotti, Bertina Foltz and Hildegarde Fillmore, stirring swatters aH. Of course, roof-top sports do have their drawbacks. Every now and then a lady would ask time out, while the referee removed an out-sized Manhattan cinder from a teary eye.

As a special added attraction, the beautician applied the right and wrong make-ups to three pairs of identical twins—a novel and fetching demonstration. My favorites, among the matching sisters, were the pretty Grace and Jerry Harding. Lashing out at them with gentle questions, I found that one of them was in a very low state of mind. Her twin, ten minutes her junior, had so far forgotten her sisterly feeling as to elope matrimonially. And the one who was ten minutes older confided to me sadly that she felt as though she were practically dying on the vine now, with her little sister married, and all!

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—Westchester County, our hoity-toity neighbor to the north, continues resolutely to ban the popular trailer from its better parkways in spite of the fact that 800 of them are registered in the county! The authorities say that the oversized carryalls are a menace to motor safety on the sharp and hidden turns of Westchester's fancy roads—and that they can take to the side thoroughfares and like it! Just a tip to anybody rolling our way.

One of our socialities, William C. Plunkett, startles his pals by becoming a designer of ladies' swim suits! Here's how it happened. A great crowd of assorted damosels came to splash in Bill's swimming pool one day and failed to bring suits. His inability to fit them all led him to think up swimming togs with a two-way stretch, which will fit almost any figure except the 2-ton truck model. And the suppity Mr. Plunket's brain-child is on sale in meny shops here—of the better sort, of course . . .

* * * *

Planes are now winging to Bermuda and back, taking a few hours for the long over-water trip. They took a planeload of newspaper folk on the junket the other day but left me home to clear up the loose ends and mind the kids.

This column appears Sunday and daily.

Today's HEALTH TALK

By Dr. Logan Clendening.

A TRAVELING salesman said to me: "My feet would make me lose thousands of dollars if I did not take care of them. When my feet hurt I am grouchy, impatient and unreasonable. I lose all my tact and diplomacy."

Some department stores employ podiatrists on their medical staff to keep the feet of their salesgirls healthy. They consider it a good investment because they know how easy it is for a weary, foot-sore salesperson to lose business.

In industry, employers recognize that the care of the feet aids good health and promotes safety. No factory employe is trustworthy on a delicate, complicated machine if attention is constantly districted by a painful foot. Defective shoes are a source of accidents, particularly in the case of women, they being the greatest sufferers. Old shoes should be barred as a safety health measure. Women in shops should wear oxfords, medium wide toes, with flexible soles and kid leather upper parts and heels not over 1½ inches in height. Rubber heels will absorb the shock of pounding on hard floors. Men in shops should select shoes with flexible soles to prevent exertion in bending the feet, and with upper parts of lightweight calf, or elk for heavier work.

The foot is also in danger at play, as witness the term which has become so popular, "athlete's foot." This is an infection with a microscopic fungus plant, which get into the skin of feet which have been macerated by standing in a shower bath. Naturally one person with an infected foot can leave enough on a gymnasium floor to infect the feet of an entire club.

People differ in their sensitiveness to this infection. I knew one man who was so susceptible to it that he had to give up bathing in the locker of his club entirely, and did all of his changing at home in his own bathroom. Even then he had to keep the floor rubbed with an antiseptic so as to be sure that he would not reinfect himself.

Poor shoes also play a part in the production of athlete's foot. Moisture and heat accumulate in heavy shoes and keep the skin soft and macerated. Feet need ventilation.

Those who are troubled with reinfection of athlete's foot should keep a formaldehyde pad in the shoes overnight.

Rain Fails To Dampen D.A.R. Party

Several Hundred Members and Their Friends Attend.

The daily downpour, which arrived on schedule yesterday afternoon did not deter the Daughters of the American Revolution from carrying out their plans for a bridge and garden party at the Martha Washington Seminary. Given by the Chapter House Corporation, of which Mrs. Harry C. Grove is president, the party began with bridge indoors and, after the rain, wound up with supper served on the veranda and a program, with the fountain court of the garden as the setting.

Several hundred members and their friends attended, some only to play cards and have tea in the afternoon and others remaining or coming just in time for the supper and program, in the evening. Mrs. Grove was one of the colonial hostesses, who received the guests. Her own wedding gown of 1894, made with a tight basque and full skirt of ivory bengaline, trimmed with small lavender velvet bows, served artistically as a dress of the period.

Miss Sarah Stowe Whitcomb, assistant principal of the seminary, and a member of E Pluribus Unum Chapter, was dressed to represent young Martha Washington. Guests remarked her resemblance to the portrait of Martha Washington in her girlhood, which hangs in the reception hall of the seminary.

Children of Members Assist in Program

The supper was in charge of Mrs. Gary E. Walters. Children of the American Revolution assisted in serving and in selling candy and also provided part of the program of music and dancing. One of the features was the little orchestra composed of members of the Potomac Society, under the direction of Mr. John R. Riggleman. Mrs. Riggleman is registrar of Potomac Chapter, D. A. R., and three of their children are members of the orchestra of ten. They include Cathryn Ann, who is pianist; James Dale, one of the young drummers, and Jackie, who, like his father, plays the violin. Mrs. Frankie E. Giroux was program chairman.

Mrs. Charles Carroll Haig, State regent of the District, arrived late in the afternoon, having spent the day making citizenship awards at the schools. Mr. Haig accompanied her and remained for the supper. Mrs. Lloyd Biddle, president of the Federation of Women's Clubs, also was a guest.

Among others there were Mrs. Hoard L. Hodgkins, honorary vice president general; Miss Fannie H. Corson, of Louisa Adams Chapter; Mrs. James H. Harper, director of the D. C. Children of the American Revolution; Mrs. George Madden Grimes, past State regent, Miss Louella Chase, regent of Susan Revier Hetzel Chapter, and Bessie Wilmarth Gahn, the historian, who also is a member of the Hetzel chapter.

Dr. Edward Thompson Present as Host

Dr. Edward W. Thompson, president of the seminary, who gave the use of the house and grounds for the occasion, was there in the role of host. Among chapter regents who attended were Miss Regina Magruder Hill, of Magruder Chapter; Mrs. Marie Rice, of Abigail Hartman Rice; Mrs. George H. Ward, of American Eagle; Mrs. Allen S. Field, of Capt. Joseph Magruder; Mrs. L. C. Hover, of Capt. Wendell Wolfe; Mrs. Claude A. Cook, of Col. Joseph Drake; Mrs. Lillian Langworthy, of Columbia; Mrs. Alfred L. Tolbot, of Constitution; Mrs. Arthur C. Houghton, Continental Dames; Miss Anne B. Coon, Descendants of '76.

Also, Mrs. Bertha C. Hedenstierna, vice regent of Federal City; Mrs. Russell Stine, of Independence Bell; Mrs. Enoch J. Vann, of Judge Lynn; Mrs. Minnie A. Tull, of Marcia Burns; Mrs. Eugene L. Culver, of Martha Washington; Mrs. Edward M. Willis, of Mary Bartlett; Mrs. Allister Cochrane, of Ruth Brewster; Miss Agnes Randolph, of Thomas Marshall; Francis Ford, of Victory.

Among others were Mrs. William D. Leetch, chairman of correct use of the flag; Mrs. Ralph Griswold, Mrs. Catherine E. Nagle, Mrs. Gertrude Mason, Mrs. George Middleton, Mrs. Thomas H. Seay, Mrs. Grant F. Chase, Mrs. Edward J. Ryan, Dr. Ella B. Fales, Mrs. Lee R. Pennington, Mrs. Elmer Curry, Mrs. Roscoe Oakley and Mrs. Sterling Bockoven.

Colonial Hostesses at Martha Washington Party

Luncheon Proceeds to Aid the Fraternity's Settlement.

Members of Pi Beta Phi, national women's fraternity, yesterday afternoon gave a benefit luncheon at the Fairfax Hotel. About 50 members and their guests attended the affair, proceeds of which will go toward the fund for the settlement school maintained by the fraternity at Gitlinburg, Tenn.

Pi Beta Phi has more than 500 resident members in the District in addition to those of the active Columbia Alpha Chapter at George Washington University. Mrs. Rogers Fred was elected president at the May meeting of the Washington alumnae, and has serving with her for one year Mrs. Smith Brookhart, vice president; Mrs. Charles Pledger, recording secretary; Mrs. William Dismer, corresponding secretary, and Miss Maxine Girts, treasurer.

Several social affairs have been given during the season in addition to the monthly meetings held by the group. The fall season is to open with a dance which probably will take place at the Columbia Country Club, where the founders' day banquet was given last April.

Among those who reserved tables and entertained parties of guests yesterday were Mrs. Fred, Mrs. Samuel Spruce, Mrs. Arthur Nesbitt, Mrs. George Horning, jr., and her daughter, Miss Marie Horning, who will enter the University of Wisconsin next fall; Mrs. James N. Greear, Mrs. Edgar Pallen, Mrs. B. Harrison Lingo, Mrs. Edmund Parry and Mrs. Griffith Garwood, who had charge of the arrangements.

Writers Close Social Season

MR. AND MRS. LOYAL B. ALDRICH last evening entertained members of the Writers League at a picnic at their home on Jonquil street, closing the series of social affairs which have been held by the organization this season.

The supper was served on the porch overlooking the garden, as the rain necessitated having it under shelter. About 20 members and a few guests comprised the company. Among the guests were Dr. J. W. Tilton, professor of education at Yale, and Mrs. Tilton, who are here spending a few days with Mrs. L. W. Tilton, president of the League, and Mr. Tilton at their home on Kalorama road.

Informal games were enjoyed during the evening. The group, which will resume its meetings in the fall, is the oldest writers' organization in Washington.

The league has conferred honorary membership on Miss Katherine M. Hopson in appreciation of her long service as its secretary.

Recent awards in the poetry and short story contests it conducted were:

Poetry, Inez Sheldon Tyler, judge; first prize, Rosa Forte; second, Ivy Lindsley; third, T. A. Simons; honorable mention, Mrs. Tilton, Charles Cottingham, Gladys Garraway Smith. Short-story contest, judged by William H. Jackson: First, Katherine M. Hopson; second, Mrs. L. B. Aldrich; third, Robert W. Cochran; honorable mention, Agnes Wright and T. A. Simons.

D. A. R. Luncheon Today.

"Madame Chairman" . . .

By Suzanne.

THERE will be voting in the voteless District tomorrow when members of Hadassah, women's Zionist organization, and of the Junior Hadassah cast their ballots for delegates to the twentieth biennial World Zionist Congress. Polls will be open from 9 a. m. to 8 p. m. in the Jewish Community Center, where Mrs. Aaron Shalowitz and Mrs. Meyer R. Bernstein will serve as Hadassah members of the local election board.

It is official Zionist election day throughout the United States and five tickets have been entered, each representing an American Zionist group. The Hadassah this year, for the first time, has submitted its own slate of delegates. Mrs. Raphael Turover, president of the Washington chapter, has been nominated as one of the Hadassah candidates.

Members of the local unit have been working vigorously for days in a campaign to "get out the vote." A telephone committee of 60 has been reminding members of the approach of election day and tomorrow a motor corps will take to the polls those who require transportation.

The congress opens August 3 in Zurich, Switzerland. Delegates are elected by proportional representation. Each voter receives a voting certificate, called a Shekolin, a term used in antiquity for coins required as a tax for the maintenance of the temple at Jerusalem. Each country is entitled to one delegate for every 3,000 Shekolins distributed. At the last congress the United States had 57.

Ethel Kassell, national vice president of Lambda Chi Sorority, which is having its national convention at the Wardman Park Hotel, is really Mrs. Frederick Clayton Holtzclaw. The combination of having wedding plans and those for a national sorority meeting on her mind at the same time has kept the vice president going 'round in circles for weeks.

She was married at All Souls' Church in Chevy Chase on June 5, went for a wedding trip, returning last week, just in time to finish up details of the arrangements for today's convention. In addition to these responsibilities, she has a job, so it would be hard to find a much busier sorority sister anywhere.

AND WHILE we're on the subject of brides, there's Mrs. Frederick Mayberry, who heads the Barnard College Club for the coming year. She is the former Mary Penn, of Tennessee, whose marriage took place only a short time ago.

Other new Barnard officers are Mrs. David Barr, who is also program chairman and an active member of the Arts Club as well as of the Barnard group; Miss Margaret Grass, treasurer; and Miss Isabel Nelson, corresponding secretary.

The adoption department of the Toy Truck received another contribution yesterday—a doll brought by Mrs. Eugene V. Pugh to the luncheon given in her honor at Rixey Mansion by a group of the Federated Church Women. It's a lovely one, not too large, and with golden curls and eyes that open and shut—a gift which means Mrs. Pugh will have her heart in the project even if she can't remain in Washington to help it along.

Miss Etta Mai Russell, juvenile court worker, who is gathering in toys for the "Truck," says people have to be reminded at this time of year that there are little folks in alleys who need toys. At Christmas time, everybody thinks about giving. Now, with a reminder of the summer-time Santa Claus (who lends instead of gives) they are just as willing to help, and are beginning to come forward with contributions of both money and toys for his Toyland.

Mrs. Pugh Is Honored At Luncheon

Federated Church Women Fete Former Head of Council.

Two Books Presented to Guest; Work as Leader Is Praised.

MRS. EUGENE V. PUGH was guest of honor at a luncheon given yesterday at Rixey Mansion, Arlington, Va., by the administrative committee of the Council of Federated Church Women. She resigned as president of the council a few weeks ago preparatory to leaving July 1 for Los Angeles to reside.

The favors at the places were little covered wagons, made by Miss Etta Mai Russell, who also wrote the verses accompanying them, which were read by the guests in tribute to Mrs. Pugh. Later she was presented with two books and a memory book, the gift of members of the committee. Mrs. H. M. Kendrick, vice president emeritus, made the presentation. The memory book contained a tribute to Mrs. Pugh's work, written by Mrs. Joy Elmer Morgan, and signed by all of her friends who were present.

Under her guidance, the Council of Federated Church Women made strides many had believed impossible in the space of a year. Its membership grew and the groups represented in it worked together in closely united effort, inspired by the enthusiasm of the president. Mrs. Frank A. Linzel, whose record of accomplishment as president of the Chevy Chase Woman's Club has been an equally outstanding one, has succeeded Mrs. Pugh as head of the organization.

Mrs. Linzel was among the guests yesterday as were Miss Russell, Mrs. Kendrick, Mrs. Morgan, and Mrs. Helen Turley and Mrs. Charles E. Felton, two friends of the guests of honor, who are not members of the committee.

Among others present were Mrs. George A. Ross, Mrs. Fannie Foster, Mrs. H. C. Briscoe, Mrs. W. O. Tufts, Mrs. W. N. Streeter, Mrs. Arthur Briscoe, Mrs. William L. Darby, Mrs. W. R. Rhoades, Mrs. J. The activities for today will be climaxed with a ball beginning at 10° o'clock, preceded by the annual banquet at which officers for the coming year will be installed.

The morning program today calls for election of officers and a tour of the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

Blasts Believed Clew To Ship Disappearance

New York June 18 (U.P.).—A possible clew to the disappearance of the motorship Moloa, a banana boat, in the southeastern Gulf of Mexico was given today by Capt. E. G. Stolt of the freighter Yoro.

Stolt told officials at the Honduran consulate that on June 5 he saw what appeared to be a triple explosion near the Florida Straits. He raced his ship toward the explosion and found a blazing hull, just sinking. No sign of life was observed. The Moloa, with a crew of nine, left Tampa June 2, bound for British Honduras.

Radio Asked to Fight Grasshopper Menace

By the Associated Press.

A Nebraska attorney told the Communications Commission yesterday he could play an important role in battling a grasshopper plague now sweeping Nebraska if he and two other Nebraskans were authorized to build a radio station at Fremont.

Arthur Sidner, the attorney, testified a Federal farm agent was authority for the assertion extermination of the pests depended largely on weather conditions. He pictured himself as a modern Paul Revere summoning farmers via radio to the battle line on days the weather was propitious for poisoning.

Board to Study Salaries Paid Women, Minors

Mrs. Kittle Named Chairman of Minimum Wage Group at Meeting.

The District Minimum Wage Board began its study of local working conditions yesterday. Its members—two men and a woman—took office and immediately formulated operating plans.

Mrs. William Kittle, past president of the Voteless D. C. League of Women Voters, was elected chairman. She represents the public. John Hanna, chairman of the board of the Capital Transit Co., represents employers, and Arthur L. Schoenthal, vice president and chairman of the executive board, Washington Building Trades Council, represents labor.

Mrs. Kittle was appointed for a term ending January 1, 1940; Hanna for a term ending January 1, 1939, and Schoenthal until January 1, 1938. Succeeding terms will be for three years.

One of the first major tasks of the new board will be a survey of wages paid women and minors in the District. The group is expected to make use of Labor Department data compiled recently on these questions. A large number of women workers, the labor report showed, now are paid less than the minimum wages prescribed by the original District Minimum Wage Board under the act of 1918.

The present board, it is understood, will consider a survey by questionnaire if it finds available data insufficient. Interested parties, it was indicated, will be given hearings before any new rates are established.

A staff will be appointed to assist the board. The 1938 budget, as it passed the Senate, contained $14,320 for staff and operating expenses. There will be a secretary in addition to several inspectors.

Atomic Force Topic Of Lesson-Sermon

"Is the Universe, Including Man, Evolved By Atomic Force?" is the subject of the lesson-sermon in all the Churches of Christ, Scientist, tomorrow. The Golden Text is from Deuteronomy 10:14: "Behold, the heaven and the heaven of heavens is the Lord's thy God, the earth also, with all that therein is."

Among the citations which comprise the lesson-sermon is the following from the Bible: "For, lo, he that formeth the mountains, and createth the wind, and declareth unto man what is his thought, that maketh the morning darkness, and treadeth upon the high places of the earth, the Lord, the God of Hosts, is His name." (Amos 4: 13).

The lesson-sermon also includes the following passage from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "God is infinite, therefore ever present, and there is no other power nor presence. Hence the spirituality of the universe is the only fact of creation."

Nude Statue Attire Debated by Sculptors

The shuddering school board trundled the gifts into a dark room and demanded suitable attire. Barnard consented to arrange some sort of clothing for the male figures.

Bob Burns Says:

This would be a terrible world if we knew just what was goin' to happen to us and when. A man came through home one time lecturin' on astronomy and he said he had positive proof the world would come to an end in seventy billion years.

Aunt Boo couldn't sleep after that. She wasted away to skin and bone. Next year when the lecturer come back, Aunt Boo rushed down to see him, and she said, "How long did you say it would be before the world come to an end?" And the man said, "Seventy billion years." Aunt Boo gave a sigh of relief and said, "Thank Heavens! I thought you said "seventy million!"

76-Foot Width For 7th Street Wins Approval

The National Capital Park and Planning Commission yesterday unanimously approved a recommendation that Seventh street, across the Mall, be widened from 55 feet to 76 feet from Constitution to Independence avenues.

This, it was pointed out, will aid in traffic movement, now that Congress has closed Sixth street to permit construction of the Mellon Art Gallery.

Museum Is Problem.

The forthcoming erection of the gallery at Seventh street and Constitution avenue, it was pointed out, has brought up the future problem of enlarging the new National Museum of the Smithsonian, just to the westward, and the preservation of the building line already set on the Mall.

The commission wants to make sure the proposed parapet wall height around the building will be in keeping with the building line set some years ago.

Zoning along the lower end of the Lee boulevard from Fort Myer to the Potomac River is receiving special attention from the commission, which is acting in an advisory capacity to the Arlington County board.

Georgetown Houses Bought.

At its session yesterday the commission reported land purchases have been completed to round out the Georgetown Playground and the Takoma Recreation Center.

Purchase of half a dozen houses in the vicinity of Thirty-fourth and Q streets was announced by Norman C. Brown, land purchasing officer.

Ten to Be Added To Police Force In Prince Georges

Cut in half last December when 7 of the members were dismissed after being indicted for conspiracy, the Prince Georges County police force will be increased July 1 by 10 men selected yesterday by the board of police commissioners on the basis of competitive examinations.

The commissioners also announced the appointment of Elon A. Turner as acting sergeant in charge of the Upper Marlboro station.

All the appointees, including 8 members of the old force who were retained, will serve for a probationary period of six months under the command of Acting Supt. Arthur W. Hepburn, of Brentwood.

The police board named two of the new appointees and two of those reappointed to take the 3-months' Washington Police Training School course. They are Earl J. Huber, of Laurel, and Charles N. Thomsen, of Takoma Park, new members, and John F. Dent, of Piscataway, and Sergt. Ralph W. Brown, of Takoma Park, members of the old force. Supt. Hepburn also announced he would take the instruction.

Invitation to use the facilities of the Washington Police Training School was extended to the county commissioners by Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of the Metropolitan Police Department.

Painter, 72, to Take Third Bride

House Painter, 72, Woman, 59, Plan 3d Matrimonial Venture

Bridegroom to Quit Work Just Long Enough for Ceremony Today; Couple Has Been 'Courting' Three Years.

At a parsonage in Georgetown this afternoon, William E. Richards, 72-year-old house painter and decorator, of 1544 Rosedale avenue northeast, will be married to his third bride—Mrs. Edna Kirkendall, 59-year-old widow from Davidsonville, Md. It will be her third venture into matrimony, too.

After the ceremony Richards will give a reception at his home. Monday he will be back at work. "I don't have time for a honeymoon," he declared last night. "I'm interested in my work and have no intention of ever giving it up. At least, not as long as I'm able to get around over the scaffolding the way I do now."

As it is, the bridegroom will miss only two days from the occupation he has followed for more than a half century. He drove to Davidsonville for Mrs. Kirkendall Thursday afternoon, but not until after painting hours were over. Yesterday, he took his fiancee to the hair dressers' for a permanent wave. He does not need to brush up on the wedding ceremony, but it will take him several hours to complete plans for the reception.

They have known each other for three years, during which Richards has been an eager suitor, driving to Davidsonville every chance he had. No one tried to "break up the match," but if he had it would have done no good.

"I have a son and three grandchildren, but I marry to suit myself," Richard declared. "I need a wife to look after me and save my money." Mrs. Kirkendall has no children.

The ceremony will be performed by the Rev. W. Kenneth Lyons, 1938 Wisconsin avenue northwest, for whom Richards recently painted a house. Both former wives and husbands are dead.

4-H Program Is Carried Out Despite Deluge

Encampment Sees Play, Visits White House, Attends Game.

Rain failed to interrupt yesterday's full schedule at the National 4-H Club encampment. The morning's program consisted of an assembly in the Department of Agriculture auditorium, a feature of which was a play, "Appreciation of Our Rural Heritage," presented by the delegates from Montgomery County, Md.

Following the play Miss Julie Newton, of the Farm Credit Administration, spoke on the part credit plays in successful farming. She pointed out that agriculture has become so complex as compared to pioneer times that finance now plays an important part in the farmer's life.

At a meeting of State leaders, Dr. P. J. Kruse, of Cornell, gave a talk on "Contests—Their Educational Function, Uses and Abuses."

Later the boys and girls were taken on a tour of the White House, and went to see the Washington-St. Louis game.

A visit to the Library of Congress last night concluded the program. Today the delegates will hear more talks, visit the Corcoran Gallery of Art, the Pan-American Union and the Lincoln Memorial, and take part in a "circus night" at their camp in West Potomac Park.

House Plans To Revamp District Rule

Measure Aims at More Authority for Commission.

Scarcely before the House action on the District tax bill had grown cold, Representative Kennedy (Democrat), of Maryland, set to work yesterday on a bill for reorganization of the District government.

He plans to have the measure ready for introduction in ten days after which he will hold hearings providing it is referred to his subcommittee.

At his own expense Kennedy has hired assistants to analyze reports and recommendations resulting from previous studies. Out of these he hopes to evolve a general plan.

"My major aim," he explained, "is to relieve Congress of the responsibility of passing upon purely local legislative matters.

Extended Authority.

"I want to give the District Commissioners sufficient authority to preform the duties usually accorded to city administrators."

A secondary purpose, Kennedy said, is to bring about a centralization of District agencies under a single head and to set up an advisory council composed of citizens to be named by the President.

While he is not inclined to go along with those demanding full suffrage rights or even the right of referendum on local affairs, Kennedy believes that Washington taxpayers should have more to say in the operation of their city government.

Among the diverse agencies he hopes to consolidate are the National Capital Parks Police and the Metropolitan Police Department, the city's recreational supervisory agencies, and control of streets and highways.

Efficiency Is Aim.

Although he had previously suggested the advisability of establishing a city manager form of government here, Kennedy said yesterday that he had not made up his mind on that point and was inclined to believe that the advisory council would solve the problem.

He does hope, however, to effect greater economy and efficiency in the operation of the city government.

Among the reports he is studying are those of the Jacobs' committee on fiscal relations, the Brookings Institution and the special committee set up by the Senate District Committee.

N. Y. Garden Loses Second U. S. Court Decision to Halt Braddock-Louis Fight

SPORTS — The Washington Post — SPORTS

16 WASHINGTON: SATURDAY, JUNE 19, 1937 X ****

U. S. Court Denies Plea To Halt Bout

By the Associated Press.

Philadelphia, June 18.—The United States Circuit Court of Appeals refused today for the second time in eight days to grant the plea of Madison Square Garden for an injunction stopping Heavyweight Champion James Braddock from fighting Joe Louis in Chicago next Tuesday.

An order signed by Judge John Biggs, jr., who with Judge J. Whitaker Thompson constituted the 2 to 1 majority of the court which decided the case in favor of Braddock last week, denied the petition of the Garden for a rehearing.

The Garden contended, in its appeal from the District Court of New Jersey, that it had a contract with Braddock to fight Max Schmeling by September 30, 1936, and that the contract still holds since the bout was postponed because of an injury to Braddock's hand.

The majority opinion of the Court, however, said "we cannot find this to be the case."

Judge Joseph Buffington, in a dissenting opinion, gave the view that Braddock's "contract-breaking conduct is unjust" and that "he comes into the Court in the position of lawlessness and unclean hands."

Jubilation in Chicago.

Chicago, June 18 (AP).—Jubilation over the third legal setback for Madison Square Garden's attempts to block the Braddock-Louis heavyweight title match, scheduled here next Tuesday, divided interest late today with rapidly developing plans for the winner to defend the championship in London against Tommy Farr, the British empire fistic ruler.

"That's the third strike for the Garden," said Mike Jacobs, co-promoter, when informed the United States Circuit Court of Appeals at Philadelphia had refused to grant a re-hearing on the Garden's injunction proceedings.

Sol Strauss, Jacobs' attorney, predicted the Garden would not even have much basis for a civil suit, claiming damages as a consequence of Braddocks' refusal to fight Max Schmeling in New York.

"I won't have anything official to say until after next Tuesday's bout," said Jacobs, "but it looks like the next championship match will be held in London. They have made us a very attractive offer."

Jacobs, who has a long-term contract with Louis, revealed some time ago his plans to take the Brown Bomber abroad, but the scheme now seems to have been revised, with Braddock making the trip if he defends the title next week.

Jacobs also has hopes of promoting a title fight in New York, late in September, but has no assurances Schmeling will return from Germany to figure in such plans.

Fight headquarters here circulated reports today that the Hitler government would not permit Schmeling to visit the United States again for fistic purposes.

Anne Ellis Upsets Dope To Win Match

Anne Ellis, steady-stroking Chevy Chase girl, created the first major upset in the women's singles yesterday at the Columbia Country Club, defeating Mary Ryan, seeded third, in straight sets, 6—2, 6—2, and joined three seeded players in the semi-final round of the Grand National tennis tournament.

At the same time, Mrs. Dorette Miller, seeded fourth, gained that round at the expense of Lillian Rixey, former child prodigy, 6—4, 6—0. Lillian, at her best in the first set, extended her more-experienced opponent, but faded in the final, as Mrs. Miller applied the heat.

The two winners join Frances Grimes, seeded second, and Sarah Moore, the favorite, who gained this round through victories Wednesday.

The semifinals will be played today with Miss Grimes opposing Mrs. Miller, and Miss Moore meeting Miss Ellis.

Near Riot Develops at Griffith Stadium When Close One Clips Al Simmons

Police Balk Mass Fight At Stadium

Simmons Stages Battle With Knickerbocker; Both Banished.

By Shirley Povich.

Transforming a dull ball game into a furious free-for-all that brought uniformed policemen dashing to the baselines, Outfielder Al Simmons, of the Nats, slugged it out with Shortstop Bill Knickerbocker, of the Browns, in the fourth inning at Griffith Stadium yesterday.

The 8,000 ladies day fans shrieked. Players of both teams sprinted from the dugouts toward the battle ground at second base. Big, 280-pound Cal Hubbard, the umpire-in-chief, flung himself into the fray. Manager Bucky Harris was a central figure in the vortex of flying fists.

Ultimately, calm was restored. Simmons and Knickerbocker were ejected from the contest and the Browns went on to win the ball game, 6 to 0, behind the two-hit pitching of Oral Hildebrand.

The Trouble Starts.

Tempers had been shortened a few minutes before the battle at second base when Hildebrand, the 6-foot-3 Kansan, hit Simmons on the hand with a pitched ball. The loud crack was easily audible and Hildebrand rushed in to protest that the ball had hit Simmons' bat.

Simmons displayed a rapidly swelling and badly bruised little finger on his left hand and angrily showed it to the pitcher. Words ensued and the stocky Nats' outfielder drew back his fist as if to punch the St. Louis pitcher.

En route, he encountered Bill Knickerbocker, the tough-looking shortstop. Nearly sticking his chin in Simmons' face, he renewed the argument. Hot words were exchanged and a battle at that spot appeared imminent. But Simmons continued on his way.

Crowd on Edge.

Standing there on first base while Travis was at bat, Simmons was looking darkly at Knickerbocker and the 8,000 in the park were aware that there would be trouble if Simmons figured in a play at second base with Knickerbocker covering the bag.

And that's what happened. Travis drove a hard grounder back at Pitcher Hildebrand. He shot it to Knickerbocker for a force play at second. The throw beat Simmons to the bag easily, and he was out, but never halting his stride he flung himself, feet first, toward Knickerbocker.

Actually he landed in the shortstop's lap. It was a vicious slide and both players went down, Knickerbocker holding the ball. They got up fighting and then it was that baseball turned the clock back to that rough-and-ready era of the game's infant days when flashing spikes and flying fists were a part of every ball game.

The 190-pound Simmons waded into the 170-pound Knickerbocker with both fists, but Knickerbocker gave no ground and it was a slugging match, even with Second Baseman Bill Carey hanging on his neck, Simmons continued his punching.

Harris Takes Part.

Then it was that Manager Bucky Harris, who had been on the third-base coaching lines, reached the scene. With a furious sprint toward the action, Harris, a veteran of coal-mine brawls, who knows the best free-for-all methods, left the ground 15 feet from Knickerbocker.

But he timed his leap perfectly. He came down with both hands around Knickerbocker's neck and bore him to the ground a dozen feet away from Simmons. Little Carey

Bosox Beat Tribe, Take Fourth Spot

Boston, June 18 (AP).—The red-hot Red Sox stretched their winning streak to five straight today and took over fourth place in the American League with a tight 5-to-4 victory over the Cleveland Indians.

The defeat was the Indians' fourth in a row since they began their current Eastern swing Tuesday, and dropped them out of the first division by a narrow percentage margin for the first time since May 6.

Although the Sox made four errors and their pitching combination of Fritz Ostermueller, Al McKain and Jack Wilson was none too effective, they came from behind twice with a three-run rally off Johnny Allen in the fourth and a two-run game-clincher off Ivy Paul Andrews in the eighth.

Reds Chase Hubbell, Trounce Giants, 5-3

By the Associated Press.

Cincinnati, June 18.—For the sixth straight time Carl Hubbell was belted out of the box today as the Reds defeated him and the New York Giants, 5 to 3, in their current series opener.

A four-run rally in the third inning drove Hubbell to the showers with his fourth consecutive defeat, put the game on ice for the Reds, and cashed in on Lefty Lee Grissom's five-hit pitching.

Grissom, surviving the Giants' three-run spree in the first inning, had little difficulty thereafter, as he breezed in with his fifth win of the year. He pitched hitless ball from the end of the second until the seventh.

The Reds batted once around in their game-winning third inning, with an error by Gus Mancuso counting one run, Alex Kampouris' double sending two more over, and Lew Riggs' triple adding the fourth.

Betty Meckley Loses To Helen Dettweiler

By Merrell W. Whittlesey.

A pair of ponderous wood shots on the final hole broke Mrs. Betty Meckley's jinx over Helen Dettweiler yesterday, and the Congressional girl star won her first District title, by a 2-up margin on the Chevy Chase course.

The defending champion, victor three times last year over Helen in important matches, was unable to cling to an early lead and bowed to the victor's 39 on the second nine, after reaching the turn all square.

The winner used to advantage a decided edge in tee shots and a putter that came through at the right time after it was guilty of some early match miscues.

Leading 2 up and three to play, Helen apparently had clinched the match on the sixteenth hole, but a putt hung on the lip of the cup and the defending titleholder kept the match alive. She won the seventeenth hole, but she could not match the wood shots of her conqueror on the final, and Helen, dormie 1 up, played safely for two putts and the only local crown that has evaded her victory-studded career.

Helen played the nines in 42-39-81, while Mrs. Meckley required three more strokes, mainly because of several pulled wood shots that continually cost her strokes.

The first hole was played poorly by both contestants, but Mrs. Meckley's approach putt salvaged a win. After halving the next three the defending titleholder rammed in a 25-foot putt for a birdie and a 2-up lead.

A trapped tee shot enabled Helen to get one back on the sixth and she evened the match on seven with a regulation par. Mrs. Meckley rallied on the next for a six, while Helen encountered a pair of bunkers and a seven, but the match was even as they turned, due to a fine 5-foot putt on the part of the eventual winner.

Strong with her tee shot on the tenth, Mrs. Meckley bowed to her younger opponent's par three, and she went two down, for the first time, as Helen rolled in a curling 5-foot putt for a win on eleven.

Mrs. Meckley lost little time in squaring the match, winning twelve and thirteen with pars, the latter via a beautiful recovery shot that settled inches from the pin.

A daring iron shot on the fourteenth hole that netted a par four again put the Congressional star in front, and, as before, she immediately increased it to 2 up when Mrs. Meckley encountered the ditch with a pulled wood shot.

Leading by two holes with three to play, Helen halved the next, lost seventeen, but pulled herself together and reached the eighteenth green in two shots for the coveted victory.

Miss Dettweiler's victory, her second important crown within a week, she won the Maryland State title last Saturday, climaxed a week of fine golf. She was never over 84 over the long Chevy Chase layout during the event and definitely established herself as the No. 1 ranking woman golfer of the District, regardless of future tournaments.

Mrs. Charlotte Stern won the first flight consolation, defeating Mrs. C. P. Medley in the final, 7 and 5, while Mrs. T. J. Johnson of Army and Navy won the second flight over Mrs. J. F. Dowdall, of Congressional, 5 and 4.

Fifth flight—Mrs. Stephen De LaMaster (Kenwood) defeated Mrs. Fred C. Meir (Kenwood), 7 and 6. Consolation—Mrs. L. T. Hausen (Army and Navy) defeated Mrs. A. S. Gardiner (Columbia), 5 and 4.

Sixth flight—Mrs. Hope Wilkinson (Indian Spring) defeated Mrs. J. J. Lowe (Army and Navy), 3 and 2. Consolation—Mrs. T. M. McDougald (Manor) defeated Mrs. H. L. Simcoe (Manor), 3 and 1.

That Baseball Brawl Was Just Swell!

By Shirley Povich.

At long last, as the Duke of Windsor would say, it finally happened—an honest-to-goodness, rootin' tootin' fist fight on the ball field between big league baseball athletes.

That little slugfest Al Simmons and Bill Knickerbocker staged out there at second base in the fourth inning yesterday was probably historic.

POVICH.

Because fists not only were swung, but actually landed. It was toe-to-toe. Nothing particularly polished about it and they weren't bothered by the fine points of what the physical culture mags call the "gentlemanly art of self-defense." On the strength of what they showed, neither Simmons nor Knickerbocker would be signed up as a white hope by the most delusioned fight manager, but it was, nevertheless, a swell fight.

* * * *

* * * *

Which makes it unique among baseball brawls. Because it is traditional that the safest place in a ball park during one of these baseball "fights" is directly between the "battlers." There, one is practically out of harm's way. Of all the sham battles ever fought, big league ball parks can claim a goodly share.

* * * *

Because the baseball athletes as a lot are cautious fellows. Heavy fines and an honest fear of getting hurt are powerful deterrents. Thus it is that baseball battles usually resolve themselves into face-making affairs with perhaps a pugnacious pose struck somewhere during the argument to lend a touch of he-man stuff. And thus it was that the Simmons-Knickerbocker imbroglio takes rank as something truly extraordinary.

* * * *

This department has been gazing out upon big league playing fields for 15 years now, and these eyes until yesterday never beheld a genuine fist fight among the baseball athletes. A hundred times I've seen 'em square off and build us up to terrific anticipation, only to make it a terrific letdown when the battlers are seized by second thoughts.

* * * *

Even the famous Buddy Myer-Ben Chapman battle in 1932 was vastly overrated. The extent of the fisticuffs that took place was a 2-foot miss by Myer with his right, and the rest of the time he was shyly digging his spikes into the ribs of the prone Chapman. Somebody said that Chapman blackened Earl Whitehill's eye en route to the dressing room, but Whitehill's peeper didn't betray any sign of a punch.

* * * *

Here is what I think is a fair composite of all the big league "fights" ever staged until Simmons and Knickerbocker put on their fuss yesterday. The characters, Joe Bloke and Joe Dokes, represent the average run of fighting ball players. And this, I think, is an accurate description of the average fight:

* * * *

"Bloke gets sore at Dokes for something that might have happened—a bean ball, a collision on the bases or an attempt to spike him, perhaps. Bloke rushes across the diamond at Dokes, brings himself to a grinding stop beyond arm's reach and squares off a la Jake Kilrain.

"Dokes gets his hands up, too, and perhaps he says something to Bloke. Bloke scowls. So does Doke. Bloke draws back his right and Dokes circles warily to his right. They both miss by 4 feet and go into a clinch. If their pals haven't reached them by that time, they stay in a clinch. If their pals are still slow in getting to the scene, they make that clinch last.

* * * *

"Strong hands pull them apart at last. Then Bloke gets truly furious. So does Dokes. With strength that is almost superhuman they attempt to reach each other again. Both fear that they might. Taking heart at their futility, they become madmen in their attempts to renew the battle. They are fighting fools—both Bloke and Dokes—when they are sure the 'battle' is over. They are led from the scene raging how they 'would have killed that guy' if the players hadn't interfered."

* * * *

But while I think of it, there was something strangely beautiful in the way that Bucky Harris flung himself into the proceedings yesterday. I think I detected the old battle love in the eye of the Nats' manager who barged in there at the first sign of a free-for-all.

* * * *

I'd heard tell that if it came down to a brawl, Bucky Harris was a pretty good guy to have a bet on despite his size. Folks who knew Bucky up there in the coal mine region where a guy was strictly on his own when it came to a wholesale fuss with no holds barred, used to say that Harris could mix it—and like it.

* * * *

Well, he wasn't long getting out there at second base after Simmons and Knickerbocker squared off and there was something that smacked of the bar-room in the proceedings after Harris reached the scene. Because he left his feet and wrapped both arms around Knickerbocker's neck and carried that guy to the ground with all the gentleness of a trip hammer.

* * * *

Knickerbocker confessed he never knew what struck him and up there in the coal mines they always figured it was best to have it that way.

Galan's Triple Helps Cubs Down Phils, 8-7

Chicago, June 18.—Augie Galan's triple with three men on and one out in the last half of the ninth inning gave the Cubs an 8-to-7 victory over the Phillies in the opening game of the series this afternoon. The Cubs moved up to a full game ahead of the New York Giants, who lost to Cincinnati.

Cardinals Triumph Over Boston, 5-2

St. Louis, June 18.—Coming from behind with a 3-run rally in the sixth which started after "Rabbit" Warstler erred on what would have been the second out, the St. Louis Cardinals defeated the Boston Bees today, 5 to 2.

After the Brawl Was Over—

Nursing an ugly looking bruise on his broken and rapidly swelling left hand, Al Simmons was still fuming in the Nats' dressing room following his fourth-inning slugfest with Bill Knickerbocker on the baselines yesterday.

"I'll teach that guy to get smart and I've got something to settle with that Hildebrand, too," shouted Simmons as he peeled off his uniform.

"Look at that finger will you? That's Hildebrand's fault. He threw that ball at me. He meant to hit me. I know it—he's notorious for throwing at batters. Talk about your rules, if they won't stop guys like him from throwing at hitters, we're all going to get killed.

"He's thrown at me before. Put me in the hospital once, when he was with Cleveland, and once is enough. I ain't going to spend seven months in the hospital like poor Mickey (Cochrane) has got to do. I'm going to protect myself when those babies start firing at me."

Simmons went into his shower, swabbed himself down with suds and came out of the cold water still hopping mad.

"And that Knickerbocker, what did he want to poke his nose into it for? It wasn't any of his business, was it? He was just sucking around for a bloody nose. He's just a meddler. I knew he was going to get what was coming to him, and he got it."

And for the first time, Simmons smiled.

Across the hall in the St. Louis dressing room, Knickerbocker was calmly sipping a soft drink. Except for a mildly puffing left eye which may or may not be a shiner this morning, he bore no marks of battle.

But he was itching for a renewal of the battle with Simmons.

"That's one guy who couldn't make anybody back up. Sure, I knew he was out to get me if there was a play at second base. Harry Davis, our first baseman, told me Simmons was saying he was going to let me have it if there was a play at second.

"I don't know how it happened that I wasn't cut up. He came at me with those spikes waisthigh. I had to go down. That was a brutal thing he did. Coming at me that way when I had to take the ball.

"But I knew when I got up that I wasn't hurt and I wasn't worrying about taking care of myself after that. I think I gave him something to remember me by, too. He'll never make his living fighting.

"He was trying to make a chump out of Hildebrand anyway; that was kid stuff, pulling back his fist at Hildy and threatening to take a punch at him.

"Sure, I butted in then, I told that big —— what I thought of him, and I called him a couple of other names. Hildy's none too big and that Simmons outweighs him by 25 pounds.

"He's squawking about getting hit on the finger—hell, that's a laugh. I've been hit a dozen times and I've been knocked down in the dirt 50 times. If you belong in this league, you gotta expect to get hit.

"That's Simmons' trouble—he can't take it."

Umpire in Chief Hubbard, in his dressing room, refused to comment on the battle, but will follow custom by telegraphing a complete report of the hostilities to League President Will Harridge.

Both a fine and suspension looms for Simmons and Knickerbocker, with Harridge's ruling due before the ball game today. If Hubbard is not too harsh with the players in his report, three-day suspensions and $25 fines may be their lot. If Harridge acts sternly, their battle may cost Simmons and Knickerbocker $100 fines and 10-day layoffs.

Nats Beaten As Fisticuffs Enliven Game

In a trice, 40 ball players were milling around the scene. Big Hubbard, noting that Knickerbocker was being amply cared for by Harris, turned his attention to Simmons and held him in a grip that was as vise-like as human hands could make it.

The police were the next to make their appearance. As if by magic, they sprouted around the scene. But by that time, matters had reached a comparative calm and the half dozen cops merely discouraged a rush of spectators to the diamond.

Manager Rogers Hornsby, of the Browns, then started to shoo his ball players off the field, and Harris noting those tactics, herded the Nats to the dugout. Simmons willingly went to the dressing room as the home town fans cheered his exit. Knickerbocker was roundly booed but got a scattered applause when he smiled to the stands on his way to the clubhouse.

Except for Bucky Harris' violent intrusion into the proceedings and Second Baseman Carey's attempts to restrain Simmons, no other ball players figured in the brawl. By the time peace was being restored, both Nats and Browns, with the exception of the two principals, were joshing each other good-naturedly.

The ball game, minus the fisticuffs, was a dull affair. The Nats were helpless before the pitching of Hildebrand, who, in a throwback to the form he owned when he broke in with the Cleveland Indians, was a superb pitcher yesterday.

Both of the Nats' two hits were cheap affairs—a looping single to center that dropped at the feet of two outfielders in the second inning, and Buddy Lewis' infield single in the sixth which Carey could have converted into an out with a decent throw.

Only three Nats reached base against the spare-ribbed Hildebrand—Simmons, Lewis, Johnny Stone, who benefited from Knickerbocker's muff in the fourth, and reached base again in the ninth when he drew the only pass issued by Hildy.

The Browns collected ten hits off Jimmy DeShong and Pete Appleton, who followed him into the box in the seventh. DeShong was the particular target of Sammy West, who made four straight hits, two of 'em doubles, and figured in three of the Browns' first four runs.

They took a 2-0 lead against DeShong in the opening inning on one hit, West's single. DeShong walked a pair and Buddy Myer contributed a costly muff on Knickerbocker's grounder. They made it 3-0 in the second when West doubled Carey home, they made it 4-0 in the sixth when Carey's double scored Huffman, and they batted DeShong out in the seventh with a three-hit uprising.

Don Budge Faces Bunny Austin in Queens Club Net Final

London, June 18 (AP).—Sorrel-topped Don Budge and Henry Wilfred (Bunny) Austin will offer British tennis fans a possible Davis Cup preview tomorrow.

These two net aces, carrying the Davis Cup hopes of the United States and Great Britain, qualified for the final round of the Queens Club Tournament today, but it remained for another American, youthful Wayne Sabin of Hollywood, to provide the gallery with most of its thrills.

Budge had a virtual walkover into the championship round, yielding only two games to the Japanese, Fumiteru Nakano, in winning at 6—0, 6—2, but Austin found himself in a real dog-fight before he could subdue Sabin, 6—4, 3—6, 6—3.

Sabin, a reserve on the American Davis Cup team, played some of the best tennis of his career, especially in the second set, and for a time had the clever Austin on the run. The Briton held a 3-1 lead in the second set when the Hollywood youngster started his drive. Making fine use of baffling drop shots, he reeled off the next five games in a row for the set and continued his streak into the third set by capturing the first two games.

Here Austin steadied. With the score 3-2 against him, the Englishman broke Sabin's service with three successive cross-court shots and went on to win the next three games without the loss of any two points.

Budge simply toyed with Nakano. The lanky Californian's drives off either hand had the Japanese netting or outing weakly. He never had a chance to reach the form he received in his match with the ailing Bryan (Bitsy) Grant yesterday.

Budge, seed No. 1 for the all-England tournament starting at Wimbledon next week and No. 1 singles star of the American Davis Cup team which will play either Germany or Czechoslovakia in the interzone finals in July, rules the favorite over Austin who customarily saves his best tennis for Davis Cup play.

The Queens tournament finalists in women's singles will be Jadwiga Jedrzejowska of Poland and Kay Stammers of England. The Polish girl eliminated Margaret Scriven of England, 6—2, 10—8, and Miss Stammers won from Mrs. J. B. Pittman, also of England, 6—0, 6—1.

Budge and Gene Mako eliminated Hal Surface, of Kansas City, and Charles Harris, of West Palm Beach, Fla., 6—1, 6—3, to reach the men's doubles finals where they will meet Christian Boussus and Yvon Petra, of France.

Mrs. Dorothy Andrus, of New York, and Stamford, Conn., and her French partner, Mme. Sylvia Henrotin, qualified for the finals of the women's doubles, beating Susan Noel, of England, and Mlle. Jedrzejowska, 6—2, 8—6. Their opponents tomorrow will be Mary Hardwick and Ermyntrude Harvey, of England.

Girl Rifler Helps Virginia Team Win

Cavalier Country Club, Virginia Beach, Va., June 18 (AP).—Fifteen year-old Ruth Cuthbert gave spectators a real thrill today as she shattered 49 out of a possible 50 to help the Winchester team take top honors in the Virginia State five-man team race, the opening event in the thirty-eighth annual Virginia trapshooting tournament now in progress here.

The Winchester team, of which Miss Cuthbert is a member, has a team total of 241 to win the 50 target event. Second honors went to Roanoke with 239, with Richmond third with 227, Cavalier number one fourth with 224, and Cavalier number two fifth with 221.

Wind Halts Practice.

Poughkeepsie, N. Y., June 18.—A wind from out of the south turned the Hudson into an angry, white-capped river today and forced curtailment of workouts by the college rowing fleet assembled here for the Intercollegiate Rowing Association regatta next Tuesday.

Filly Wins Feature at W.Va. Track

By Walter Haight.
A Staff Correspondent.

Charles Town Race Track, June 18.—Edith Walker, 5-year-old daughter of Judge Hay and Kitty Mullally, turned in an easy victory over five other sprinters in today's unnamed feature race at this track. Never worse than second in her five starts this year, Edith Walker splashed over the muddy track to defeat Radial by two lengths, with Teddy's Star in third position and three additional lengths away.

The winner outclassed her opposition on records and the crowd of 4,000 took to her like a duck takes to water. So enthusiastically was she bet that the mutuel plant had to use a substitute deck of tickets. After "1 to 3" had been quoted on the odds boards, she finally closed at "7 to 10" and rewarded the host of backers with a $3.20 mutuel.

Edith Walker was Palumbo's third winner of the day and he gave her a faultless ride. Radial outran her for a brief moment but once in front she did not give her supporters any periods of anxiousness.

Never Cease Wins.

Mrs. A. White's Never Cease, a daughter of Ed Crump which failed to show anything on the big tracks, turned in a smashing mud race to win the opening event. Capably handled by Jockey W. Snyder, the filly was in front soon after the break and led Scoutallow and Muddler to the wire. Never Cease paid a $14 mutuel.

Handley, a $5.40 favorite, came through with a lucky victory in the second race. Rolling Along and Justa Canter were running head and head in front of the field, lost all chance when the former ran out badly, carrying her rival along. Irish Bud was then the leader but Jockey Root brought Handley up on the inside with a rush that decided the issue.

The choice players made it two in a row when White Sweets' Palumbo up, won by six lengths in the third event. The Wrack filly ran with the pace of Lilteen to the far turn and then drew out after taking command. Tar Heel was second and Chaumont third in the field of eight. The winner paid $5.

Palumbo's Second Winner.

Reigh Tetrarch brought Palumbo his second winner of the day in the fourth race. At a $7.20 mutuel the Reigh Count colt came from off the pace of Whiskora to win by a neck in a blanket finish. Gay Lass forced Whiskora into third money.

Palumbo rode his fourth winner of the program in the sixth race, taking the distance event with the veteran James Boy, a $7.40 betting proposition. War Chat and Miss Catalan were second and third.

Hardwick Stakes To Midday Sun

Ascot, England, June 18 (AP).—Mrs. G. B. Miller's derby winner, Midday Sun, captured the Hardwick stakes of a mile and a half, last big event of the fashionable Ascot meeting today.

Lord Astor's Plaster Cast was second, a length and a half back, and William Woodward's American-owned Flares third. Flares was beaten out a head for place money.

Midday Sun started at 2 to 1 in the betting with Plaster Cast at 6 to 1 and Flares at 5 to 1. Five horses ran.

The victory was worth about $10,600, to the owner of the winner.

Aqueduct Offers Rich Race Card

New York, June 18 (AP).—Topped by the $10,000 Dwyer for 3-year-olds, Aqueduct has arranged the richest card of its season for tomorrow with three stakes on the seven-race program.

The Dwyer, a test of 1¼ miles, has attracted seven colts, including the three which took the money in the Shevlin Stakes last week. The $7,500 Carter Handicap, a sprint of 7 furlongs, has drawn a field of nine headed by J. A. Manfuso's Suburban winner, Aneroid, while ten 2-year-old fillies have been named for the 5 furlongs of the $2,500 Astoria Stakes.

HANDLEY, saving ground entering stretch, responded to stout drive to be up in concluding strides. FLYING DERVISH closed some ground and pulled up lame. JUSTA CANTER, rated along on outside of ROLLING ALONG, was carried far out by latter entering stretch.

WHITE SWEETS, much the best, was steadied along close to pace of LILTEEN, took command easily when called upon, but was kept to strong hand ride to end. TAR HEEL, always a forward factor, ran an even race and was going gamely at end. CHAUMONT lacked early speed, came around field and closed with rush. MONOLOGUE moved up menacingly on swing for stretch and faltered. LILTEEN stopped badly after setting pace.

REIGH TETRARCH, within striking distance of leaders from start, gained sharply when put to drive and under strong handling, disposed of WHISKORA to be drawing out at end. GAY LASS saved ground entering the stretch and closed with good courage on inside. WHISKORA, after beating gate, weakened slightly in closing strides after setting good pace. LA MARQUISE, AUPOIN and DARLING PAT were bothered by WHISKORA at break. VERESE S. floundered in going and was pulled up. COUNSELLOR BILLY was left.

POST BRIGADE was taken out in middle of track and rallied mildly in stretch. VENNIE H. pressed the pace, came through on inside entering stretch and weakened badly. Strikes Hamper Business Plans For Expansion

New York, June 18.—In its weekly summary of the general business situation, the Standard Statistics Company says today:

"It is only natural that sentiment in the financial and commodity markets and among business men generally is depressed at this time. With profits threatened and with plant operations and efficiency completely disrupted by the workers, not a few organizations have postponed plans for expansion. If this movement becomes widespread, the possibility of further cyclical improvement in the capital goods industries will be considerably lessened.

"Strikes in the steel industry, and the constant interruption of operations in many lines because of labor troubles, are accelerating the seasonal recession in industrial activity which has been in progress for the past several weeks, and prospects for a reversal of this trend over the next month or two are relatively unpromising.

Steel Output Curtailed.

"The effects of the strikes are being felt in a broad group of industries. Steel production is, of course, being curtailed sharply. The large number of stoppages of production in the automobile industry in recent weeks has retarded assemblies even though there have been no major strikes in that industry. Freight car loadings have dropped more than seasonally and power output in the strike areas naturally has been affected adversely.

"The most encouraging factor in the present business outlook is that retail trade for the country as a whole has been maintained in a satisfactory manner. If the distribution of goods continues at recent levels, it is bound to have a favorable influence on manufacturing activities later on as buyers will eventually have to enter the markets to replace depleted inventories.

$50,000,000 Bills Offered by Treasury

The Secretary of the Treasury gives notice that tenders are invited for Treasury bills to the amount of $50,000,000, or thereabouts. They will be 273-day bills; and will be sold on a discount basis to the highest bidders.

Tenders will be received at the Federal reserve banks or branches up to 2 p. m. on Monday. Tenders will not be received at the Treasury Department.

Certain-teed Products Omits Pfd. Dividend

New York, June 18 (AP).—Conservation of working capital for future business expansion was cited by Walter G. Baumhogger, president of Certain-teed Products Corporation, today as the reason for the omission of the 6 per cent preferred dividend due next month.

In spite of the fact earnings for the current quarter were in excess of dividend requirements, the president said the board of directors felt this action was advisable.

Auto Output Lower.

Detroit, June 18 (AP).—Ward's Automotive Reports estimated today that this week's output of the automobile plants would total 111,620 units compared with 118,798 last week and 100,161 cars and trucks this week a year ago.

Credit Men Oppose D. C. Tax Proposal

The Washington Association of Credit Men, the Wholesalers' Association, went on record at its regular meeting on June 15 as opposing income tax legislation for the District of Columbia. It also resolved to oppose the business privilege tax, but indorsed a bill to require registration for a nominal fee of foreign corporations doing business in the District. The association also recommended the passage of a bill to establish a small claims and conciliation branch of the Municipal Court of the District of Columbia.

These bills had been carefully considered by the association's legislative committee, headed by Waldo J. Tastet, treasurer of Fries, Beall & Sharp Co., and the former president of the association, and the recommendations made reflect the interest of the association as well as the committee's thought toward general civic improvement.

Air-Conditioning Makes Big Gains

The air-conditioning industry will probably show an increase of better than 100 per cent in 1937 over 1936, according to an analysis by the Brookmire Economic Service, which points out that record sales of $41,311,000 for the first four months of 1937 indicate that air-conditioning is outgrowing the "infant industry" phase, and is now entering the rapid-growth stage of long-term expansion.

First wide use of air-conditioning was in theaters, restaurants and stores to attract greater patronage in warm weather. Use is rapidly spreading to hotels and public buildings, and sales are actively being pushed for installations in offices and residences.

Wheat Prices Decline With Rain in Canada

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, June 18.—Despite late rallies that temporarily almost overcame earlier sharp setbacks, Chicago wheat values averaged much lower today as a result of rains in Canada.

The rallies were based to a great extent on authoritative reports that even under the most favorable weather conditions Canada this season can harvest only a moderate yield of wheat. One comprehensive summary said that a return of seed and feed can alone be expected to 50 to 60 per cent of the great acreage of Saskatchewan Province, usually the largest source of Canada's breadstuff production.

At the close Chicago wheat futures were 1⅛@1½ cents under yesterday's finish, July, 1.08¾@1.08⅞; September, 1.08⅝@1.08¾; December, 1.10¼@1.10⅜; corn, ¼@2¼ advanced; July, 1.14@1.14⅛; September, 1.02⅛@1.02¼; December, 75⅞@76; oats unchanged; September, 35⅝; and rye showing ⅛@1½ drop; September, 76⅞. In provisions, the outcome was unchanged to 15 cents lower.

Phoenix Life Sales 79% Over Year Ago

New York, June 18.—The Phoenix Mutual Life Insurance Co. of Hartford, Conn., with its specially trained field organization limited to selected, full-time men, reports unusually large gains over May of the previous year.

In amount of new life insurance issued, the increase is 79 per cent. The company also experienced the largest May-month receipts of new premiums in its entire history.

Private Building Continues to Gain

New York, June 18 (AP).—Percentage of private construction business on the books of G. A. Fuller Co. is larger now than at any time in the last three years, L. R. Crandall, president, told stockholders at the annual meeting.

Although Government building is still the largest portion of the company's bookings, the increase in private building during recent months is a favorable sign, he said.

The Market

By Carlton A. Shively,
A Special Correspondent.

Stocks Improve Moderately in Quiet Trading; U. S. Bonds Uncertain.

New York, June 18.—On a turnover of less than 700,000 shares the stock market hardened a little. Government bonds were somewhat uncertain. Commodities were dull. September wheat closed 1¼ cents lower at 108¾ cents a bushel. Foreign currencies were held fairly well under control. Sterling was little changed, and francs were bolstered after showing weakness at times.

Week-end trade ews was mixed. Railroad car loadings for last week recovered sharply from the effects of the Memorial Day holiday observed in many sections of the country and the traffic was about 9 per cent over a year ago. Ward's estimate of automobile output for the week was down moderately, but held about 10 per cent over last year. Nothing came to light of enough importance in itself to influence general prices.

Prices for stocks were firm from the start, but gains with few exceptions were fractionti. A few stocks uncovered thin markets on increased offerings. Steel and Chrysler were examples. Chrysler dropped two points on an initial sale of 4,000 shares, after a bid and offer on the tape at 99@102, but a rally came. Steel also recovered from its early dip of 2 points. Utilities were noticeably firmer. Good ones were Electric Power, Public Service and North American.

Spurts in Steels.

National Steel and Inland spurted more than 2 points each on the more favorable turn in the strike news. Demand was light. Bethlehem held under its previous closing price most of the time. In the rail list, Central failed to find much support, but most of the group were a little higher. Oils hardened, led by Standard. Rubbers, chemicals, tobaccos and metals edged forward. Around the edges Certain-teed Products broke 2 to 4 points. Universal Pictures preferred fell 9 points on one sale.

Changes in the monetary scene this week were brought about largely by income tax payments and the Treasury loan of $820,000,000. Subscriptions to the Treasury notes by the banks accounted for the fall of $180,000,000 in excess reserves, bringing the total of $750,000,000. Excess reserves, even with that reduction, probably would have fallen but slightly in the week had it not been for the further sterilization by the Treasury of an immense amount of gold. Gold exports on the week were shown as $58,000,000, plus a net decrease in gold held under earmarks for foreign account of $7,000,000.

That gold presumably was offset by the issue of Treasury obligations, which sopped up the money from the gold importing banks, kept down excess reserves, added to the public debt and in general played a futile role. On the gold side there was more to the story, for the Federal Reserve System reported a total addition to monetary gold stock of $102,000,000. It is reasonable to suppose that the difference between that figure and the imports was gold sold to the Treasury by the stabilization fund.

Gold obtained by the stabilization fund is metal for which it has poured out dollars, either in response to a demand for them by foreign capital seeking safety in flight or greater investment opportunity on this side. The Treasury presumably has bought a great amount of French francs, in order to holster that currency and secured gold from them later. The Federal Reserve System again was inactive in the Government bond market, on balance at least, and was called upon for only a small amount of credit assistance to the member banks.

The Round Up.

The French government is working on plans to bring French capital home, and it is reported that our national administration is considering steps to co-operate with France. Many guesses are offered as to what the plans may be. It is suggested that this country will tax foreign capital employed here, presumably by lifting the income rate. Such a tax, or any other measure, would need to apply alike to all countries; no exception can be made of France. The effect might not be altogether pleasant on this side, were action effective.

Harmful.

Withdrawal of foreign funds—the bulk of which is by no means hot money, but is invested here with just as much permanence as is American-owned money—would be harmful if brought about by restrive measures, just as barriers to the foreign trade are harmful. Legislation calculated to depress our markets and tighten money on this side, merely for the sake of friendship of one government for another, both being engaged in the business of operating on an extravagant scale and at heavy deficits, needs to be carefully considered. The French financial trouble will disapepar just as soon as a little economy is used, the budget brought into balance, and an end put to the radically socialistic measures of nationalized industry, redistribution of wealth and capital baiting.

40 New Flying Boats For Imperial Airways

London, June 18 (AP).—A meeting of shareholders of Imperial Airways, Ltd., today approved resolutions seeking a 400 per cent increase in the company's authorized capital. Sir George Beharrell, director, disclosed that 40 new flying boats were planned at a cost of about $9,000,000.

Issuance of 4,000,000 new shares at £1 ($5) would raise the company's total capitalization to about $25,000,000. Subscriptions were invited at once for 1,000,000 ordinary shares of the new issue at a price to be set by agreement between the company and the government.

Transamerica Offers to Buy Back Its Stock

Bank Holding Company Says Move Is to Protect Stockholders.

San Francisco, June 18 (AP).—Transamerica Corporation announced today it would buy its own stock for retirement to "protect the interests of stockholders." John M. Grant, president of Great Giannini Holding Co., sent a letter to stockholders in which he said:

"Considering present market conditions issued by strikes and labor uncertainty and considering also the evident undue pressue on Transamerica stock, your management is of the opinion that it should protect the interests of the stockholders who have evidenced their good faith and confidence through good times and bad by retaining their holdings.

"After due consideration your management decided to purchase for account of treasury a substantial number of shares of Transamerica at such price or prices as in its judgment are warranted by underlying values.

"Shares purchased will be retired to treasury and later extinguished, and for every 10 shares so purchased we will save from distribution one share of Bank of America stock."

This last reference was to the proposal, to be voted on July 10 by stockholders, to declare a dividend on Transamerica shares, payable in Bank of America stock, equivalent to one share of Bank of America stock for each 10 Transamerica shares now outstanding.

Curb Prices Rise On Broad Front

New York, June 18 (AP).—Brushing opposition out of the way, the curb market marched forward on a broad front today. Following betterment in the steel crisis quiet but steady buying forced up most issues from fractions to as much as 4 points.

Evidently unconcerned over the Government's investigating activities, Aluminum Co. led the parade with a jump of 4 points, closing at 139. Utilities were sought after. American Gas & Electric was up 2 to close at 32 and Northern States Power "A" improved a point.

Oils and mining shares joined the upward climb. Creole gained 1½ and Gulf Oil was up 1¼. Lake Shore Mines finished at 49¼, up 1⅝. Also better by major fractions were Pan American Airways, Niagara Hudson Power and Electric Bond & Share. A trifle lower were Cord Corporation, Pittsburgh Plate Glass and Wright Harg.

On the Air Today

An agreement between Grover Whalen, president of the 1939 New York World's Fair, and David Sarnoff, president of the Radio Corporation of Amer . was signed yesterday whereby television will be exhibited in a public demonstration at the World's Fair. The ceremony of the signing was televised in the television studio of the National Broadcasting Co. and members of the press both saw and heard Mr. Sarnoff and Mr. Whalen completing the agreement.

RCA, by terms of the contract, will construct an ultra-modern building on the fair grounds in New York and therein will be housed a complete show of all branches of radio. This building will be linked directly with the NBC television transmitter located in the Empire State Building.

Plans are being completed for the televising of outstanding events that will take place at the fair. People who have been wondering just what is the status of the "youngest child in the family of radio"—television—will be shown the latest workings and possibilities of television.

D. C. Man Foresees Boom in Aviation

Boise, Idaho, June 18 (AP).—In a piece of legislation a speaker professed tonight to see the promise of an American aviation boom. Wayne W. Parrish, of Washington, addressing the Northwest Aviation Planning Conference, said:

"If the McCarran-Lee bill is enacted at this session of Congress you're going to see aviation boom." This measure, Parrish said, would provide that airlines "must carry the mail upon request and under the supervision of the Postoffice Department, but their operation would be directed by the Interstate Commerce Commission."

Inland Steel Co. Answers Workers

Chicago, June 18 (AP).—The Inland Steel Co. asserted tonight in an answer to charges brought against it before the National Relations Board by the Steel Workers Organizing Committee that a signed contract with the S. W. O. C. would "deprive individuals of free choice in labor representation."

It asked that the complaint be dismissed.

The S. W. O. C. charged Inland violated the national labor relations act by declining to sign a contract.

Inland's plants are strike-bound over the issue in a walkout called by the steel workers' committee.

Death Comes To Doumergue At Birthplace

Former President, Premier of France Succumbs Unexpectedly.

By the Associated Press.

Aigues-Vives, France, June 18.—Gaston Doumergue—"Papa" and "Gastounet," to most of France—died today in this ancient village of his birth, which he left as President and premier to lead France through critical days of political strife.

Death came unexpectedly to the retired 73-year-old stateman. He awakened in apparent good health this morning. A few minutes later, his wife said, he complained of illness, fainted and died without regaining consciousness.

Death was due to an embolism, a physician said.

Tonight the body of the former President lay upon a bed within the family home. Old friends and neighbors formed in line to file past the bier and pay last respects.

And in the Chamber of Deputies at Paris there was tribute from the man who felled the Doumergue cabinet of 1934 and caused the old man to retire, disheartened and weary.

Edouard Herriot was the eulogist. "Doumergue took power only in the national interest and always showed his attachment for his country. The country will retain him in memory," Herriot said.

Ended Stavisky Crisis.

He traced the Doumergue career—first Protestant president, elected in 1924, and his two terms as premier. But he did not refer specifically to the events which brought Doumergue out of retirement in 1934.

Doumergue formed a cabinet in February, 1934, after the Stavisky scandals, rioting in the streets of Paris and political agitation forced out Edouard Daladjer.

For nine months he ruled with an iron hand. He was credited with restoring order, refurbishing a crippled treasury and ending the Stavisky crisis.

Then he sought to strengthen the powers of the premier, including the right to dissolve Parliament without consent of the Senate.

Herriot, as vice premier, and five fellow radical Socialist ministers quit the cabinet in protest. Doumergue resigned and retired—"the situation is clear," he said then. "The responsibilities for breaking the political truce are established and I am more at ease . . ."

Succeeded by Flandin.

The Chamber of Deputies stood in 15 minutes of adjournment after Herriot had concluded his eulogy, and the Senate likewise paid its tribute.

Premier Leon Blum presented condolences through officials of the prefecture here. The government announced it would ask permission to conduct a national funeral, including a military procession. At his own request, Doumergue will be buried in the family vault here.

The elder statesman had just come from his home at Tournefeuille to spend a week in the surroundings where his family had tilled vineyards for four centuries.

A favorite of the public, he usually was called "Gastounet" and "Papa," although he was a bachelor until he was 67. He was married to Mme. Jeanne Grave, a widow, just 12 days before the end of his presidential term in 1931.

'Funniest Guy In Hollywood' Dies Laughing

By the Associated Press.

Hollywood, June 18.—Al Boasberg, called "the funniest guy in Hollywood," died laughing today.

A heart attack ended the life of the ace gag writer while he still was chuckling over the startled look friends gave him last night when he told them he was going to one of Hollywood's "colossal" film epics "to get some sleep."

Boasberg was 45, a writer who for more than 25 years had been writing jokes for top-ranking comedians on the stage, in pictures and on the radio. He signed a new contract for the Jack Benny program yesterday. His most recent picture was the Marx Brothers' "A Day at the Races."

His 200 "Helpers."

"My father wanted me to be a jeweler," he said, "and he got me a job in a little shop. I complained about being lonesome, so the boss told me I could hire a helper.

"I hired 200 guys, and we all got fired."

He then went from his native Buffalo to New York, where he began writing "gags" for the vaudevillians.

"I got $3 a gag," he said. "They didn't have the law then about taking money under false pretenses."

When he came to the movies, the first thing that impressed him, he said, was the automobile traffic in Hollywood. Of one particularly dangerous street, he remarked:

"A pedestrian got across there the other day and six drivers immediately demanded a rematch."

Nut on oat of Arms.

They recalled today his famous ending to an argument with an actor. Boasberg had been grubstaking the man for months while he was unemployed. The actor's entire wardrobe either was bought by the writer or formerly belonged to him.

Nevertheless, a heated argument began, climaxed by the Thespian's remark: "I've got a good notion to give you a swift kick." Boasberg looked at him a moment, and said: "With my shoes?"

His coat of arms, which he placed on the chimney of his home and illuminated at night, was a squirrel munching a nut. The famous "house that gags built" had a small copper basin and a tiny sign in the backyard. It read, "Termites, please bathe here."

They will attend the public meeting at 8 o'clock, at which Miss Sybil Baker will speak.

He will take for his subject, "Keeping Awake." The church school will hold its closing session at 9:45 o'clock, with all departments meeting in Pierce Hall.

Restaurant Workers Strike in Cumberland

Cumberland, Md., June 18 (AP).—Joseph Martin, secretary of Bartenders and Culinary Workers Local No. 569, said today that employes of two restaurants in the business section had been called out on strike for failure to sign closed shop agreements.

Martin said the employes were those of Thomas Restaurant and the Washington Lunch Room. A brief tussle between two waitresses at Thomas', Martin said was the only disturbance to the walkout. He said one girl struck another as the walkout was in progress. No arrests were made.

2 Battleships May Be Built In Navy Yards

Roosevelt Says Government Could Build Vessels at Lower Cost.

President Roosevelt hinted yesterday that both new battleships to be laid down this year may be built in Government yards.

He said at his press conference that on the face of bids offered Wednesday by three private companies for building one of the 35,000-ton superdreadnaughts, it was evident they could be built more cheaply in navy yards.

The Bethlehem Shipbuilding Corporation of Quincy, Mass.; the New York Shipbuilding Corporation of Camden, N. J., and the Newport News Shipbuilding and Dry Dock Co., Newport News, Va., submitted bids ranging from $46,212,500 to $59,900,000.

Estimates furnished by the Philadelphia and New York navy yards for the same work were $36,560,000 and $37,265,845, respectively.

The President answered a direct question as to whether, as a result of this difference, he would order teh two ships built in navy yards, by saying he has not yet had an opportunity to study the question.

It had been contemplated originally that one ship would be built by a private contractor and the other in a navy yard, in accordance with the law requiring that at least 50 per cent of the naval construction be allotted to Government plants.

Secretary Swanson, in expressing disappointment yesterday at the size of the private bids, said it was always possible that the Navy might build both in the navy yards. He explained that the law gives the President discretionary authority to order such a course.

Mr. Roosevelt declined to offer any comment on unofficial reports that the Japanese government had rejected his new appeal for an international agreement to limit naval guns to 14-inch caliber. He said the State Department has received no reply from Tokyo to its direct communication on the subject.

If Japan's refusal is final, naval officers expressed confidence that the United States Government would order 16-inch guns mounted on the two new battleships.

144 Archivists Are Attending Sessions Here

A. R. Newsome, President, Is Principal Speaker at Banquet.

One hundred and forty-four delegates from various sections of the country registed yesterday for the first annual meeting of the Society of American Archivists in the National Archives Building.

Following an all-day session, the archivists gathered last night in the Mayflower Hotel for their annual banquet. A. R. Newsome, president of the society and head of the history department, University of North Carolina, was principal speaker.

He cited the society's objectives, pointing out that one of the major aims is to stimulate, gather and disseminate useful information on problems of internal administration incident to the collection, preservation, availability and use of public archives.

"The society will seek to enlist the co-operation of all archival organizations," said Newsome, "to plan the interchange of information, to prevent overlapping efforts and to discover ways of mutual aid. With respect to international affairs, it will seek to cultivate friendly relationships with foreign archival agencies; to effect the interchange of information and publications and to participate in international undertakings."

Other speakers yesterday were Thomas P. Martin, assistant chief, Manuscript Division, Library of Congress; Herbert A. Keller, director of the McCormick Historical Association, and Victor Hugo Paltsits, chief of the American history division and keeper of manuscripts, New York Public Library.
